The Eagle Weeps:

The Eagle Weeps Keith Honaker,1994 A Journey Towards Peace Tamar Deborah,2012-03-30 I have been writing since I was 13 years old It started for me as a means to express my thoughts while at the same time being able to keep my thoughts to myself For me writing is something that must come through inspiration It takes me to a place outside of myself At any point in time a thought an idea or even a single word comes to mind and the poetry envelopes itself around it The concept may take a minute to create or it could take an hour or more it all depends upon how strong the thought or the idea may be A force so strong within me says write and so I write Then the work takes on a life all its own Twenty years ago I looked ahead and I saw an entirely different future for me It is truly surreal to me because I was looking at my situation at a different in my life and I could not see beyond those circumstances This book is intended to inspire others to trust in a power beyond the realms of what they may see at the moment because they are not looking at an accurate picture of their future Dare to dream to believe that all things are possible to them that believe to believe in themselves not because of but in spite of circumstances to view different perspectives No one knows what the future holds for them They can only imagine I encourage you to find that inner spirit then trust that higher power dare to dream and believe it will come to fruition The journey towards finding that inner peace is a long one one that people search for throughout their lifetime Tamar Deborah

Alexandra Verini,Abir Bazaz,2023-09-29 This book opens up a dialogue between pre modern women identified as mystics in diverse locations from South Asia to Europe It considers how women from the disparate religious traditions of Hinduism Islam and Christianity expressed devotion in parallel ways The argument is that women's mysticism demands to be compared not because of any essential female experience of the divine but because the parallel positions of marginalization that premodern women experienced led them to deploy intimate encounters with the divine to speak publicly and claim authority The topics covered range from the Sufi devotional tradition of Sidis Indians of African ancestry to the Bhakti poet M r ba and the nuns of Barking Abbey Collectively the chapters show how mysticism allowed premodern women to speak and act by unsettling traditional gender roles and expectations for religious behavior At the same time as uncovering connections the juxtaposition of women from different traditions serves to highlight distinctive features The book draws on a range of disciplinary expertise and will be of particular interest to scholars of medieval religion and theology as well as history and literary studies Evening hours, ed. by E.H.
