Off the wall: an encounter with designer David Milan

Calligraphy has returned with strength, above all in the field of branding, where loose, spontaneous but well-executed strokes convey elegance and sophistication. But what seems a simple trend, is a thousand years old art that not many can masterfully execute.

David Milan is an independent artist, illustrator and designer. He creates visual work including typography, lettering and illustrations for clients around the world such as, Nissan, MTV, Fremont Barber, Wix, Coca, HBO and many more companies, agencies and studios. His work has been featured in Photoshop Creative Magazine (June US, October 2015), Goodtype Book, Calligraphy Masters, Behavior and more. But it was graffiti that first sparked his love affair with words. "Everything started when I got into graffiti writing at the age of 11. I began to feel some kind of love for letters at this point. A couple of years ago, I started working with letters again, and that was when my life began." Despite replacing the wall and spray paint with a tablet and Apple pencil, David never forgets his roots: his new portfolio is strongly influenced by his background in graffiti, starting from the color-infused homages. Scrolling through his work feels like looking at a digital wall of art, with his flowing strokes creating a dynamic sensation and his effortless color scheme almost transporting you to another dimension. David says his design process is basic. "The hardest part of my job is finding a good quote. I could spend hours looking for a good one. Once I have the text, I start to make sketches in different styles. After choosing the best one, I proceed to trace it with a marker, brush or digitally on a tablet. Finally, I put the lettering on a photo or image, adding some effects etc. I love to work with gradients, shapes and colors. I use the dripping effect a lot. I usually work with iPad Pro and Apple pencil, but I also love working with Crayola markers and Tombow brush pens. They are such great tools for every lettering artist.
