Qualitative Nursing Research Janice M. Morse, 1990-11-01 Qualitative Nursing Research addresses many of the problematic issues in qualitative research Leading qualitative methodologists from orientations in phenomenology grounded theory and ethnography contribute chapters on their favourite issues which also form the bases for the dialogues which alternate with each chapter With the exception of a few chapters that describe a single method the problems discussed relate to every qualitative nursing project improving the use of self examining one s own culture some myths and realities of qualitative sampling debates about counting and coding data and ethical issues in interviewing

Writing and Reading Mental Health Records Fred Reynolds, David Mair, Pamela Correia Fischer, 1992-02-14 The accuracy and completeness of mental health records are crucial in the effective treatment of patients. In addition, such records can form the primary bases for profound legal decisions including civil litigation and involuntary commitment to an institution. This volume explains the importance of mental health records to patients, practitioners, and third parties such as courts, employers, insurance companies, as well as future patients and practitioners. The book is illustrated by real-life comments by health professionals from a variety of backgrounds who describe their experiences of the often frustrating process of record keeping.

Professional Writing in Context John Frederick Reynolds, Carolyn B. Matalene, Joyce Neff Magnotto, Donald C. Samson, Jr., Lynn Veach Sadler, 2013-11-05 This volume explores adult work world writing issues from the perspectives of five seasoned professionals who have logged hundreds of hours working with adults on complicated written communication problems. It examines the gap between school world instructional practices and real world problems and situations. After describing the five major economic sectors which are writing intensive, the text suggests curricular reforms which might better prepare college educated writers for these worlds. Because the volume is based on the extensive work world experiences of the authors, it offers numerous examples of real world writing problems and strategies which illustrate concretely what goes wrong and what needs to be done about it.

Writing Centers and Writing Across the Curriculum Programs Robert W. Barnett, Jacob S. Blumner, 1999-02-28 Writing Centers have traditionally been viewed as marginalized facilities within their institutions. At the same time, faculty in all disciplines have come to stress the importance of good writing, and institutions have created Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) Programs to address this concern. Often the interests of Writing Centers conflict with those of WAC programs, and the theoretical foundations of the two may not necessarily be the same. Nonetheless, Writing Centers, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, have become more involved with efforts to promote Writing Across the Curriculum and have formed fruitful partnerships with WAC Programs. While journal articles have begun to discuss these partnerships, this book offers an extended treatment of the topic. By examining the relationships between Writing Centers and WAC programs, this volume challenges the view that Writing Centers are marginalized and demonstrates how they are aggressively moving toward the curricular center of education. Each chapter examines the evolving theoretical, practical, and institutional relationships between Writing Centers and Writing Across the Curriculum programs. By drawing from institutionally specific experiences, expert contributors present a variety of approaches for establishing and developing effective Writing Center/WAC partnerships. Included are perspectives from established and emerging theorists from all levels, including high schools, community colleges, small four-year colleges, and universities, and major research institutions. The contributors accurately portray the true diversity of Writing Center/WAC partnerships and assess the compatibility of these partnerships with larger institutional missions. The volume touches on such topics as the use of computers in writing instruction, the use of student writing tutors, and the problems inherent in discipline
