Working with the Elderly Irene Mortenson Burnside, 1986 Working with Older Adults: Group Process and Technique Barbara Haight, Faith Gibson, 2005-03-30 Beginning with an overview of the changing world of aging this book goes on to address practical principles and guidelines for group work Working with Older Adults Irene Mortenson Burnside, Mary Gwynne Schmidt, 1994 Rev ed of Working with the elderly Group Process, Communication, and Relating as a Core Phenomenon in an Older Support and Learning Group on Aging and Health Lisa Rose White, 2017 Supporting older adult clients to improve self management of health is a focus of care for community based nurses working with this population The available literature on small group work indicates participation in a variety of group types has been shown to be beneficial for older adults However there is little research specifically on group work with adults over the age of 75 when individuals are at greater risk for actively facing illness and multiple personal losses and may need enhanced social supports to assist achievement of the psychosocial tasks of old age This research examined a support and learning group on aging and health involving seven community dwelling older adults over the age of 75 using grounded theory research method One male and six female subjects aged 76 84 years old participated in the study To identify themes occurring in group and communication process transcripts of the meetings pre and post interviews with individual participants and other data sources were analyzed using open axial and selective coding On the Group Process level themes of group action interaction were categorized by time phases of Before Beginning Middle End and Beyond the time the group met On the Communication Process level themes were abstracted under categories of Initiating Responding Relating and Integrating Group and Communication processes were then nested and conceptualized as a fractal occurring both over the course of the eight weeks and in every group meeting Relating was identified as a core phenomenon of the group and communication process contributing to positive self assessment regardless of whether the participant affirmed a similar or contrasting position in comparison with other participants Findings support the achievement of group type objectives for support and learning groups and delineate more clearly group participants experience leading to the outcomes of reinforcement of a positive self assessment and the development of knowledge and skills related to aging and health Findings may assist the design and implementation of similar groups and may direct further research on specific aspects of individual and group process in small group work with community dwelling older adults Foundations of Social Work Practice in the Field of Aging Roberta Rubin Greene, 2007 The aging of societies is a global phenomenon In the United States alone the life expectancy for both men and women will continue to increase over the next few decades and with that a population explosion of older adults The dramatic increase in the number and diversity of older adults elevates the visibility of gerontological matters As a result social work practice is becoming more multigenerational thereby demanding social workers regardless of their professional endeavors to be equipped with the most innovative theories and practices to serve older adults and their families This comprehensive text spans the new knowledge and skills required in direct practice areas group work and macro practice It also outlines the Geriatric Social Work Competencies as developed by social work educators necessary to serve the older adult population and suggests how these competencies can be integrated into foundation curriculum Social work educators students practitioners administrators and policymakers will find updated useful information in this text regarding assessment tools cultural influences evidence based practices intervention techniques theoretical examples Individuals are living longer and healthier lives in part because of the extraordinary growth of biomedical knowledge and public health initiatives The confluence of the rapid and large increase of the older population and the exponential increase in the dissemination of knowledge create an imperative for social workers to employ the most recent knowledge in their practice with people living increasingly long lives JoAnn Damron Rodriguez Department of Social Welfare University of California Los Angeles
