Leigh Anderson,Janet W. Looney,2002-01-01 While a universal definition of progress has proved elusive measures of progress have been defined and grouped into the broad areas of material wealth social relations technical capacity and moral aesthetic and intellectual sensibilities However not until the Progress Project whose results are gathered here has the impact of progress on public policy in these realms been systematically explored In this volume noted scholars in economics government education technology literature culture and religion among other fields discuss the meaning and measurement of progress in their areas of specialty They assess particular policies that have either promoted or retarded progress and provide recommendations for policy processes or instruments that better reflect the nature of forward movement in the current era Making Progress is an important contribution to both the theoretical and practical literature on public policy it is a resource for scholars and students as well as a guide for policymakers analysts and advocates who help craft those policies in the name of progress Measuring Innovation in OECD and Non-OECD Countries William Blankley,2006 It is widely accepted that innovation is key to economic growth Countries where research and innovation are high on the national agenda are best suited to prosper in the knowledge based economy Conversely countries whose economies are mainly dependent on natural resources and basic industries tend to lack competitiveness and flexibility in adapting to changing global trends The Organisation for Economic Co operation and Development OECD has long been concerned with the measurement of research and experimental development R D and innovation activities Under apartheid rule South Africa was barred from participating in OECD activities Shortly after the advent of democracy in South Africa in 1994 the then Department of Arts Culture Science and Technology now the Department of Science and Technology initiated the process of applying for observer status on the OECD Committee for Scientific and Technological Policy South Africa gained observer status in 1998 In March 2001 the Department and the OECD jointly hosted an international seminar in

Pretoria on the measurement of innovation activities in OECD and non OECD countries This book is a collection of selected papers that were presented at the seminar by leading international and South African experts in innovation measurement The chapters reflect various aspects of the measurement of innovation and how these measurements are applied in different countries The volume contributes to the debate that exists between developing and developed countries on their approaches to the measurement of innovation

The Skeptical Environmentalist Bjørn Lomborg, 2001 The Skeptical Environmentalist challenges widely held beliefs that the environmental situation is getting worse and worse The author himself a former member of Greenpeace is critical of the way in which many environmental organisations make selective and misleading use of the scientific evidence Using the best available statistical information from internationally recognised research institutes Bjørn Lomborg systematically examines a range of major environmental problems that feature prominently in headline news across the world His arguments are presented in non technical accessible language and are carefully backed up by over 2500 footnotes allowing readers to check sources for themselves Concluding that there are more reasons for optimism than pessimism Bjørn Lomborg stresses the need for clear headed prioritisation of resources to tackle real not imagined problems The Skeptical Environmentalist offers readers a non partisan stocktaking exercise that serves as a useful corrective to the more alarmist accounts favoured by campaign groups and the media

World Development Report, 1993 This report examines the interplay between human health health policy and economic development Because good health increases the economic productivity of individuals and the economic growth rate of countries investing in health is one means of accelerating development More important good health is a goal in itself During the past forty years life expectancy in the developing world has risen and child mortality has decreased sometimes dramatically But progress is only one side of the picture The toll from childhood and tropical diseases remains high even as new problems including AIDS and the diseases of aging populations appear on the scene And all countries are struggling with the problems of controlling health expenditures and making health care accessible to the broad population This report examines the controversial questions surrounding health care and health policy Its findings are based in large part on innovative research including estimation of the global burden of disease and the cost effectiveness of interventions These assessments can help in setting priorities for health spending The report advocates a threefold approach to health policy for governments in developing countries and in the formerly socialist countries First to foster an economic environment that will enable households to improve their own health Policies for economic growth that ensure income gains for the poor are essential So too is expanded investment in schooling particularly for girls Second redirect government spending away from specialized care and toward such low cost and highly effective activities such as immunization programs to combat micronutrient deficiencies and control and treatment of infectious diseases By adopting the packages of public health measures and essential clinical care described in the report developing countries could reduce their burden of disease by 25 percent Third encourage greater diversity and competition in the provision of health services by decentralizing government services promoting competitive procurement practices fostering greater involvement by nongovernmental and other private organizations and regulating insurance markets These reforms could translate into longer healthier and more productive lives for people around the world and especially for the more than 1 billion poor
