Womens War:

The Women's War Deborah Montgomerie, 2001 This book explains the ambiguities of wartime changes in the private and public lives of New Zealand women It considers women as mothers wives and lovers as well as workers using many examples from real lives Deborah Montgomerie s main argument is that despite the changes the war was essentially a conservative period pointing out that understanding the continuities in gender relations is as important as cataloguing female firsts Her book stylishly challenges accepted wisdom and offers a clear fresh view of a period often viewed through the blurry lens of nostalgia and anecdote BOOK JACKET Women's War Stewart Ross, 2007 Published in association with the Imperial War Museum this series uses primary source evidence such as diaries posters newspaper cuttings and oral accounts to portray life on the Home Front The Woman's Temperance Movement ... a Concise History of the Department of Printed Books, 1922 Our War Too Margaret Paton-Walsh, 2002

In the late 1930s a number of American women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation's entry into World War II. While their story is fairly well known, Margaret Paton Walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that American intervention was absolutely necessary. Paton Walsh recounts how the United States became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of American women who faced it as a necessary evil. Covering the period between 1935 and 1941, she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women's organizations, informal women's networks, and even male-dominated lobbying groups. In the Great Debate over whether America should enter the war, some women favored aid to the Allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct U.S. involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a Nazi victory. Paton Walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day: Elizabeth Cutter Morrow whose son-in-law Charles Lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman supported the revision of the Neutrality Acts to allow the sale of arms to the Allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast. Soon other women joined this debate: Esther Brunauer of the AAUW, journalist Dorothy Thompson, and organizations like the League of Women Voters and National Women's Trade Union League broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate American aid for the Allied cause. Focusing on the conflict in Europe, Paton Walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the Lend Lease program for America's entry into the war but supported it nevertheless. By late 1941 the Women's Division of the Fight for Freedom Committee had been established, no longer merely advocating aid to Britain to keep American boys out of battle; this organization supported direct American involvement in the war as a means of stopping Nazi oppression. While most historians have focused on women's pacifism, Paton Walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs. Our War Too is a story of American women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace. It expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on American public opinion over the build-up to the war. The Official Index to The Times, 1915 Women and War Jeanne Vickers, 1993 The American Labor Year Book, 1920 The Biographical Cyclopaedia of American Women ..., 1924 The Journal of Political Economy, 1917 Deals with research and scholarship in economic theory.
