The sun's rays are in part reflected by clouds and snow surfaces and, therefore, heats up and, in turn, are (invisible to human eye), instead of may become "trapped" by very atmosphere, such as carbon dioxide.

What are the consequences?

The increase in Earth's temperatures causes the ice caps and glaciers to melt, which causes a rise in the sea level, changes more extreme weather (hurricanes and storms), the quantity and seasonality of rains, the flowering and growth times of plants (with serious consequences on agricultural) and ocean acidification (damaging coral reefs).

Where can these effects be seen?

The effects are evident not only in the polar regions but also in other areas of the planet. For example, some areas are becoming more and more arid, with possible serious consequences for ecosystems and the people who live there.

it's cold at the Poles

The Polar regions are found at the top and bottom of the Earth and they are cold, without plants or flowers, the heat and sun stay frozen the most of the year and the ice doesn't melt so the eye can see. Only a few animals are tough enough to survive these conditions.

Ice Fact
The North and South poles are at the top and bottom of the Earth. Every 24 hours the Earth spins once around its axis. The sun's rays come from the sun through the middle part of the Earth, from there to the poles.

The poles are covered in permanent ice and snow, and the animals that live in these areas are very hardy creatures. In these regions are changing rapidly because of climate change, and the animals that make them struggle to survive.

How do animals and plants survive the polar climate?
All animals and plants that live in the polar regions have had to adapt to low temperatures. Animals generally have thick fur and layers of fat to survive the cold. Among these, the polar bear is the most famous, but there are also the reindeer, muskox, arctic fox, walrus and penguin.
