

MODELLERS AND THEIR MODELS

Helen McHugh's painted figures stand up well in male-dominated model competitions. Graham Dixey reports ...

One of the most things about horses has always been the people who ride them. It's not a horse that you can't ride. It's a person that you can't ride. And that's what makes the world of model horses so special.

The people who ride are often called "horse people" and they are a very special breed. They are the people who have spent their lives with horses and they know them better than anyone else. They are the people who have seen the horse in all its glory and they have captured that spirit in their models.

It's not just the people who ride that are special, it's the horses themselves. They are the most beautiful creatures on earth and they have captured the hearts of people all over the world. They are the people who have seen the horse in all its glory and they have captured that spirit in their models.

Graham Dixey's all-time favorite horse model is a painted figure of a cowboy on a horse, holding a lasso and a hat. It's a very special breed of horse and they are the people who have seen the horse in all its glory and they have captured that spirit in their models.
