

❑ CONCLUSION

- The development programmes act as the accelerating force in the changing process cultural diffusion and acculturation through the interaction with other non-tribal people in every domain of life.
- Comparatively rural Santals are the bearer of traditions whereas their urban counterpart are breaker of it.
- Al-beit the rural inhabitants are diverted to some extent from original primitive traditions. Most of the villages are interconnected by roads resulting in the decrease in inter regional disparities in all sphere of life. Food habits and material culture is changing gradually.
- The Santals immigrants of the city enjoy fruits of development (urbanisation) such as civic amenities, education, health, transport and communication, banking facilities and other services that in turn have affected mostly their material culture and they have become more modernised.
- The actual modification of Santal traditional culture started when they came into contact of Bengali culture. Now the urban Santal people are in stage of acculturation dominated by Bengali culture. If this process of changes continues in present manner with due course of time the Santal may lose their cultural identity.
