RATIONING

German submarines sank ships bringing food to Britain, so rationing was introduced. People were limited to how much they could buy of certain foods, such as clothes, medical and furniture. People were encouraged to grow their own vegetables and any spare food - this was called Dig for Victory.

HOME GUARD

Men over 16 and under 60 were called to join the armed forces and played an important part in the defence of Britain by joining the Local Defence Volunteers (Home Guard). Also called "Dad's Army", they helped defend the coastal areas of Britain and other important areas such as airfields, factories and harbours.

HEYLER'S VENGEANCE WEAPONS

The Germans invented a flying bomb, known as the V-1 or "Doodlebug". These were sent against Britain, where they dropped to the ground when their fuel ran out and exploded. Thousands hit Britain, resulting in almost 23,000 casualties. The Germans also designed another, the V-2, which was the first man-made object to enter space.
