Tin House 16:

Tin House Win McCormack, 2015 From the website Globalism's ascendance was supposed to send tribalism the way of the dodo Yet from Waziristan to Williamsburg tribal affiliations still dictate social order There may now be more societal fluidity but finding one's tribe within nomadic urban cultures has never felt more urgent And the tales told within ancient or temporary tribes shape and define these societal organizations In this issue we turn to our favorite storytellers and poets hoping to arrest time long enough for them to show us what life is like in our contemporary tribes There are Julia Elliott's cavemen and cavewomen wannabes in her story Caveman Diet and Alice Sola Kim's teenage Korean American adoptees trying to find their place in the suburban jungles of Mothers Lock Up Your Daughters Because They Are Terrifying Roxane Gay looks at the complicated way her Haitian American family handles the consumption of food from both countries We asked five very different writers Stacey D Eraso Tayari Jones David Shields Zak Smith and Molly Ringwald to give us short takes on moments of belonging or not The poets including Tony Hoagland Cate Marvin and Eavan Boland naturally cut to the emotional core of what it means to claim or to be claimed by a tightly bound group Whatever your other tribes because you have read these words we now consider you part of the Tin House tribe No initiation rituals or signifying tattoos necessary just please enjoy the issue

Tin House Win McCormack, 2015 From the website People don't notice whether it's winter or summer when they're happy Chekhov must've been happy when he wrote that And why are we happy to keep pushing that boulder up the literary hill when we know that it is just going to roll back down and we're going to have to start all over again Because putting out issue after issue truly does make us happy We believe that great writing is as essential to our well-being as bread and wine and a roaring fire It is also an honor and a thrill A thrill to be surprised time and again even from work that comes from beyond the grave Frank Stanford the gritty Arkansas poet nicknamed the swamprat Rimbaud died nearly forty years ago but recently a cache of unpublished gems surfaced and we're delighted to share them with you Then there is the family of Tin House writers we've long known and who never fail to dazzle us with their ability to show us the world anew In this issue Joy Williams channels the spiritualist Georges Gurdjieff visiting the Arizona childhood home of Susan Sontag and Ursula K Le Guin leads us into a brutally unforgiving desert in her parable The Jar of Water Any slings and arrows of outrageous submissions are worth it when you get to read new poetry from Dorothea Lasky and Richard Siken Throw another log on the fire and join us in forgetting whether it is winter or summer
