Yi-Min Huang, Matt Eliot, Jennifer Turns, Emma Rose, Jessica Yellin, 2007 Engineering education can be thought of as a complex design activity where educators create a range of teaching artifacts including course curricula classroom policies lecture notes exams and timelines for student group projects In order to design such artifacts engineering faculty must make a series of teaching decisions each of which can impact their students learning and engagement with course activities Given the importance of decision making in engineering education the authors hope that by beginning to characterize engineering educator decisions educators will gain a greater awareness of their decision making by recognizing characterizing and anticipating decision points Thus the initial research questions driving this study were 1 What aspects of engineering educators decision making processes are prominent during their participation in the instructional development process and 2 How can engineering educators make more effective decisions This exploratory study looks at engineering faculty decisions as expressed during the instructional development process Transforming Teaching and Learning Through Data-driven Decision Making Ellen Beth Mandinach, Sharnell S.
