That Singing Mesh:

I Belong to This Band, Hallelujah! Laura Clawson, 2011-06-01 The Sacred Harp choral singing tradition originated in the American South in the mid nineteenth century spread widely across the country and continues to thrive today Sacred Harp isn't performed but participated in ideally in large gatherings where as the a cappella singers face each other around a hollow square the massed voices take on a moving and almost physical power I Belong to This Band Hallelujah is a vivid portrait of several Sacred Harp groups and an insightful exploration of how they manage to maintain a sense of community despite their members often profound differences Laura Clawson's research took her to Alabama and Georgia to Chicago and Minneapolis and to Hollywood for a Sacred Harp performance at the Academy Awards a potent symbol of the conflicting forces at play in the twenty first century incarnation of this old genre Clawson finds that in order for Sacred Harp singers to maintain the bond forged by their love of music they must grapple with a host of difficult issues including how to maintain the authenticity of their tradition and how to carefully negotiate the tensions created by their disparate cultural religious and political beliefs

Jean-Marc Ginoux,2017-04-18 This book reveals the French scientific contribution to the mathematical theory of nonlinear oscillations and its development The work offers a critical examination of sources with a focus on the twentieth century especially the period between the wars Readers will see that contrary to what is often written France s role has been significant Important contributions were made through both the work of French scholars from within diverse disciplines mathematicians physicists engineers and through the geographical crossroads that France provided to scientific communication at the time This study includes an examination of the period before the First World War which is vital to understanding the work of the later period By examining literature sources such as periodicals on the topic of electricity from that era the author has unearthed a very important text by Henri Poincar dating from 1908 In this work Poincar applied the concept of limit cycle which he had introduced in 1882 through his own works to study the stability of the oscillations of a device for radio engineering The discovery of this text means that the classical perspective of the historiography of this mathematical theory must be modified Credit was hitherto attributed to the Russian mathematician Andronov from correspondence dating to 1929 In the newly discovered Poincar text there appears to be a strong interaction between science and technology or more precisely between mathematical analysis and radio engineering This feature is one of the main components of the process of developing the theory of nonlinear oscillations Indeed it is a feature of many of the texts referred to in these chapters as they trace the significant developments to which France contributed Scholars in the fields of the history of mathematics and the history of science and anyone with an interest in the philosophical underpinnings of
