Women And Food Security:

Gender and Food Insecurity in Southern African Cities Dodson, Belinda, Chiweza, Asiyati, 2016-10-17 This gender analysis of the findings of AFSUN's baseline survey of poor urban households in eleven cities in Southern Africa in 2008 and 2009 has implications for urban national and regional policy interventions aimed at reducing urban food insecurity. By comparing female centred and other households light is shed both on the determinants of urban food insecurity which relate fundamentally to income employment and education and on the manifest gender inequalities in access to the largely income based entitlements to food in the city. These insights can be used to design and implement practical and strategic interventions that could simultaneously and synergistically address both gender inequality and food insecurity. Practically and in the immediate term interventions such as social grants and food aid if targeted at the poorest households will automatically capture a greater proportion of female centred households. Enhancing food security for the urban poor requires education and training job creation and income generation strategies ensuring equitable access to such opportunities for women and girls. Supporting and enabling women's engagement in such activities and enterprises including in food production and marketing has the potential to strengthen food security at the same time as reducing gender inequality in a form of virtuous cycle.

Women's Empowerment in Agriculture Esha Sraboni, Hazel J. Malapit, Agnes R. Quisumbing, Akhter U. Ahmed, 2013-11-01 Women's low status and persistent gender gaps in health and education in South Asia contribute to chronic child malnutrition. Smith et al 2003 and food insecurity von Grebmer et al 2009 even as other determinants of food security such as per capita incomes have improved. This is particularly relevant for Bangladesh where chronic food insecurity continues to be an important issue despite steady advances in food production. To be able to leverage agriculture as an engine of inclusive growth there is a need to develop indicators for measuring women's empowerment, examine its relationship to various food security outcomes and monitor the impact of interventions to empower women. Using nationally representative survey data from Bangladesh we examine the relationship between women's empowerment in agriculture and two measures of household food security per adult equivalent: calorie availability and dietary diversity. We use the Women's Empowerment in Agriculture Index to assess the extent of women's empowerment in agriculture and instrumental variables techniques to correct for the potential endogeneity of empowerment. We find that the overall women's empowerment score, the number of groups in which women actively participate, women's control of assets and a narrowing gap in empowerment between men and women within households are positively associated with calorie availability and dietary diversity.

Gender Equality and Food Security Olivier de Schutter, 2013

Food for the Future United Nations Population Fund, 1996 Unless women are placed at the centre of efforts to increase food production and are given support for their reproductive rights and reproductive health vital opportunities will be missed to meet the world's present and future food needs.

Rural Women and Food Security Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1998

At the World Food Summit in 1996 governments acknowledged the fundamental contribution of women to food security and agreed to promote women's full and equal participation in the economy This documents provides an overview of the roles of women as key actors for sustainable rural development as food producers and consumers in the context of global and regional agricultural trends

Strengthening sector policies for better food security and nutrition results: Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2018-11-07 Rural women make up the majority of food producers in the world and they are vital to the wellbeing of their families and communities Yet in many parts of the world women face multiple forms of discrimination that affect their potential They often have less access to resources and fewer opportunities to participate in decision making processes The gender and food security policy domains are generally disconnected food security and nutrition objectives are rarely reflected in gender related policies and gender equality concerns are often missing in food security and nutrition policies This gender guidance note seeks to facilitate policy dialogue on how to best synchronize gender equality and women's empowerment policy objectives and food security and nutrition ones to enhance coordination between the two policy domains and ultimately enable women on an equal basis with men to realize their potentials as key partners in improving food security and nutrition

Food Security and Food Sovereignty Challenges in Africa Lere Amusan,2023-11-25 This edited volume advances knowledge of food security and food sovereignty for students and researchers The book analyses and interprets field data and interrogates relevant literature which forms the basis for decisions on improving food security and sovereignty in Africa It deepens an understanding of food fraud and of multinational corporations MNCs manipulations of food quality to the detriment of consumers It provides information to advance new knowledge on the issue of international interdependency of unequal exchange and the inactions of governments against the dumping and waste of food

Transforming Gender and Food Security in the Global South Jemimah Njuki,John Parkins,Amy Kaler,2016-11-25 Drawing on studies from Africa Asia and South America this book provides empirical evidence and conceptual explorations of the gendered dimensions of food security It investigates how food security and gender inequity are conceptualized within interventions assesses the impacts and outcomes of gender responsive programs on food security and gender equity and addresses diverse approaches to gender research and practice that range from descriptive and analytical to strategic and transformative The chapters draw on diverse theoretical perspectives including transformative learning feminist theory deliberative democracy and technology adoption As a result they add important conceptual and empirical material to a growing literature on the challenges of gender equity in agricultural production A unique feature of this book is the integration of both analytic and transformative approaches to understanding gender and food security The analytic material shows how food security interventions enable women and men to meet the long term nutritional needs of their households and to enhance their economic position The transformative chapters also document efforts to build durable and equitable relationships between men and women addressing underlying social cultural and economic causes of gender inequality Taken together these combined approaches enable women and men to reflect on gendered divisions of labor and resources related to food and to reshape these divisions in ways which benefit families and communities Co published with the International Development Research Centre Role of Rural Women in Food Security in Asia and the Pacific ,2002 Innovations in Achieving Sustainable Food Security in Eastern and Southern Africa Negatu, Workneh, Musahara, Herman, 2016-06-13 These papers address roles and issues related to social and institutional innovations and approaches in food security in Southern and Eastern Africa They include implementation of food security policy rural livelihood and agricultural innovation land consolidation for food security interdisciplinary school based health for food security harnessing indigenous and modern knowledge for food security household food resource handling for food security institutions for technological innovation the role of land tax in food security trade protectionism and food security and gender power relations in food security Food Security in Practice Maria Agnes R. Quisumbing, Bonnie Folger McClafferty, 2006 The Unending Hunger Megan A. Carney, 2015-01-23 Based on ethnographic fieldwork from Santa Barbara California this book sheds light on the ways that food insecurity prevails in women s experiences of migration from Mexico and Central America to the United States As women grapple with the pervasive conditions of poverty that hinder efforts at getting enough to eat they find few options for alleviating the various forms of suffering that accompany food insecurity Examining how constraints on eating and feeding translate to the uneven distribution of life chances across borders and how food security comes to dominate national policy in the United States this book argues for understanding women s relations to these processes as inherently biopolitical Planet, People, and Peace In the Age of Artificial Intelligence Prof. Dr. Muhammed ASHFAQ Prof. Dr. Selçuk BALI Doç. Dr. Gökben BAYRAMOĞLU Dr. Nida PALABIYIK Mr. Sharjeel YOUSAF, 2026-02-06 Ensuring A Square Meal: Women And Food Security In Southeast Asia Theresa W Devasahayam, 2018-08-21 Research on women and food security in Southeast Asia has been limited The collection of chapters in Ensuring a Square Meal Women and Food Security in Southeast Asia is one of the first attempts at providing a lens into the linkages between women and food security at the household community national and transnational levels More broadly the chapters examine women s contribution in households resource distribution to produce food and the purchasing power to buy food In analysing the various facets of food security in relation to gender the analyses focus on the meanings of private and public and the extent to which the effects of the two spheres spill over into each other Given women s critical role in food production and provision the book assesses the structural forces enabling women to access productive resources and in turn ensure sustainable strategies for food security as well as it evaluates how governments might address the constraints women face in this vital role Women in Food Production and Food Security in Africa Jennie Dey, 1984 FAO pub Research paper on the economic role of rural women in food production in Africa looks at food shortages and FAO s mandate to support women farmers examines the sexual division of labour in the household and obstacles met by women in

Gender, Nutrition, and the Human Right to Adequate Food Anne C. Bellows, Flavio L.S. Valente, Stefanie Lemke, María Daniela Núñez Burbano de Lara, 2015-12-07 This book introduces the human right to adequate food and nutrition as evolving concept and identifies two structural disconnects fueling food insecurity for a billion people and disproportionately affecting women children and rural food producers the separation of women s rights from their right to adequate food and nutrition and the fragmented attention to food as commodity and the medicalization of nutritional health Three conditions arising from these disconnects are discussed structural violence and discrimination frustrating the realization of women s human rights as well as their private and public contributions to food and nutrition security for all many women s experience of their and their children s simultaneously independent and intertwined subjectivities during pregnancy and breastfeeding being poorly understood in human rights law and abused by poorly regulated food and nutrition industry marketing practices and the neoliberal economic system s interference both with the autonomy and self determination of women and their communities and with the strengthening of sustainable diets based on democratically governed local food systems The book calls for a social movement led reconceptualization of the right to adequate food toward incorporating gender women s rights and nutrition based on the food sovereignty framework

Household Food Security and the Role of Women James Price Gittinger, 1990 Improving household food security in Africa means focusing on the role of women because they play a critical role as food producers and income earners for their families Unless the production and productivity of these women is increased efforts to improve household food security in Africa will not succeed In turn increasing production and productivity of women farmers and entrepreneurs means removing the obstacles they face in doing their work and improving their access to resources and information so that they can help themselves In short women must not be marginalized but must be brought into the mainstream of economic and social life so that they can fully use their productive capacity and contribute more to the welfare of their families and the nation In seeking to improve household food security in Africa it is also important that consideration be given to increasing the benefits that women receive and improving their decision making authority However care must be taken that new policies and programs do not add to women s already large burden of providing food and care for their households Women ,1988 Households' Food Insecurity and Coping Strategies in the Face of Vulnerability Mesay Kebede Duguma,2015 This book draws attention to the livelihood and food security situation of women farmers a topic largely neglected by academic studies It elucidates in a detailed empirical examination the impact of informal social institutions on food security and coping strategies of these households in the Meskan district of southern Ethiopia The area is environmentally and socially challenged The results develop an understanding of the gender dimension of food in security and present important implications for public policy Series Spectrum Berlin Series on Society Economy and Politics in Developing Countries Spektrum Berliner Reihe zu Gesellschaft Wirtschaft und Politik in Entwicklungslandern Vol 110 Subject Sociology African Studies Women s Studies Gender Studies Agricultural Studies
