Academic Literacy and the Nature of Expertise Cheryl Geisler, 2013-11-05 The first full length account integrating both the cognitive and sociological aspects of reading and writing in the academy this unique volume covers educational research on reading and writing rhetorical research on writing in the disciplines cognitive research on expertise in ill defined problems and sociological and historical research on the professions The author produced this volume as a result of a research program aimed at understanding the relationship between two concepts literacy and expertise which traditionally have been treated as quite separate phenomena A burgeoning literature on reading and writing in the academy has begun to indicate fairly consistent patterns in how students acquire literacy practices This literature shows furthermore that what students do is quite distinct from what experts do While many have used these results as a starting point for teaching students how to be expert the author has chosen instead to ask about the interrelationship between expert and novice practice seeing them both as two sides of the same project a cultural historical professionalization project aimed at establishing and preserving the professional privilege The consequences of this professionalization project are examined using the discipline of academic philosophy as the site for the author's investigations Methodologically unique these investigations combine rhetorical analysis protocol analysis and the analysis of classroom discourse The result is a complex portrait of how the participants in this humanistic discipline use their academic literacy practices to construct and reconstruct a great divide between expert and lay knowledge This monograph thus extends our current understanding of the rhetoric of the professions and examines its implications for education

Student Writing and Academic Literacy Development in Higher Education Richard Bailey, 2009

ABSTRACT The aim of this study was to determine how student writing and academic literacy are experienced and perceived in a university by academic staff and students and how pedagogical interactions are influenced by institutional discourses and practices The research is a form of institutional case study realised through a qualitative ethnographic style inquiry The methodology comprised semi structured interviews with forty eight academic staff from a range of disciplinary backgrounds and thirty five student respondents from diverse areas of study and discourse based analyses of textual materials at both the institutional and departmental levels The findings of the present research revealed that there is variation in the way academic staff perceive the nature and the learning of student academic literacy and their understanding of the practices which support that learning in a university Students face significant challenges in adapting to variable expectations and managing the requirements of writing and assessment in the contemporary context The research also revealed that there are structural aspects of higher education practice which appear to have adverse effects on the learning and development of student academic literacy and the capabilities of academic teaching staff to actively support and foster student learning in that domain There are implications for the role of writing in learning and teaching and its position in the curriculum It is argued that a more explicit approach should be taken to student academic literacy by embedding it in disciplinary teaching and learning A number of ways based on the evidence of this research are suggested to advance pedagogical research and develop appropriate practice to that end The findings are linked to wider debates about teaching learning and educational reform in higher education The thesis concludes by comparing and contrasting two disparate research paradigms for investigating the higher education experience A new paradigm is conceptualised which draws on existing models theoretically and empirically but adds dimensions which address the exigencies of research in the contemporary context of higher education It is argued that this reframing has the potential to raise and enhance the profile of pedagogical and student writing research consonant with current higher education policy aims and ambitions
