AIDS An African Perspective is the first authoritative account that provides an overview of the AIDS problem in Africa. Written by an African scientist who has worked for over two decades comparing diseases prevalent in Africa to those of the developed world, the book addresses a number of topics relevant to the diagnosis, treatment, and management of patients with AIDS and HIV infections in Africa. The book presents the results of new research, including new hypotheses and terminology, and outlines recommendations for the control of AIDS in Africa as presented to the African Ministers of Health in 1989 in Uganda. The molecular biology and viral pathogenesis of HIV 1 and HIV 2 are discussed, as is the epidemiology of HTLV I in the African diaspora. Little-known bibliographic references written in English and other languages are also provided.

AIDS An African Perspective will be useful to scholars, researchers, and students in epidemiology, public health, pathology, internal medicine, infectious diseases, immunology, virology, oncology, molecular biology, sociology, and anthropology. It will be invaluable to members of the medical, dental, nursing, and laboratory technology community, particularly for individuals who work or intend to work in Africa or Third World scenarios.

NEW INFORMATION FOR THE MEDICAL WORLD The book presents new research and terminology to the medical world. These are described briefly below:

- Molecular analyses of recent and archival tissues for HIV 1 DNA sequences using PCR on paraffin-embedded tissues from Africans with Kaposi's sarcoma (KS) before and after the onset of the AIDS epidemic were studied for the first time, and comparisons made with similar studies carried out on tissues from American Blacks and Hispanics in North America.
- Immunohistochemical studies using monoclonal and polyclonal antibodies to HIV on African AIDS tissues and electron microscopy were also carried out and reported for the first time.
- The term Kaposigenesis is being introduced into the medical literature for the first time to describe the development of Kaposi's sarcoma. The author proposes to outline the possible mechanisms for its development and to harmonize the current, diverse views about the histogenesis of this enigmatic malignancy.
- The author also proposes a classification of KS that utilizes the etiologic role of retroviruses as an important distinguishing factor.

Medical Research Centres Informa Healthcare, 1995. Focuses on research and development centers in the areas of medical and biomedical sciences, including those in anatomy, biochemistry, clinical medicine, dentistry, drugs, genetics, immunology, neoplasms, pharmaceutical technology, and surgery.
