White Blue Collars In A Mill Shutdown:

White- and Blue-collars in a Mill Shutdown Felician F. Foltman, 1968 Case study of a plant shutdown in the iron and steel industry in the USA as an example of human behaviour in the face of redundancy with particular reference to differences in workers adaptation to the circumstances of nonmanual workers and of manual workers covers employees attitude in job hunting the experience of older workers occupational choice the effect of educational level and skill on reemployment opportunities psychological aspects wages etc Statistical tables The President's Commission on Income Maintenance Programs, Background Notes United States President of the United States, 1970 Manpower Planning and Utilization in the Federal Government United States Civil Service Commission. Library, 1963 Blue Collar Workers Displaced by Complete and Permanent Plant Shutdowns Jean Sexton, 1975 Losses to Workers Displaced by Plant Closure Or Layoff Arlene Holen, 1976 Workers who are displaced when a plant closes or when there is a permanent layoff resulting from reduced demand usually suffer losses in earnings These losses are due to unemployment and to wage reductions which reflect more permanent impairment of earnings capacity It is important to know the long terms effects of job displacement Many prospective changes in government policy can result in reductions in demand for specific products and lead to some job displacement This paper reviews seventeen recent studies of the effects of job loss on earnings They range from case studies of specific plant closures to more broadly based studies of the effects of job loss in which control groups are used to estimate losses in earnings over a number of years after layoff Methods of analysis range from simple tabulations to estimation of income determination models based on human capital theory The losses documented in these studies can be taken to illustrate the magnitude of losses that would result from displacements due to increased import penetration Some of the studies deal with job losses specifically due to increased import competition but all are concerned with job losses following declines in demand for domestic production Whatever the cause of a fall in demand for the products of an industry increased import penetration changes in tastes etc the skills of workers that are specifically adapted to either the industry or to particular firms within that industry become less valuable Workers and the Evolving Economy of the Eighties United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Labor and Human Resources, 1981 Background Papers United States. President's Commission on Income Maintenance Programs, 1970 Personnel Literature United States. Office of Personnel Management. Library, 1968 Closing Sysco Lachlan MacKinnon, 2020-02-24 Closing Sysco presents a history of deindustrialization and working class resistance in the Cape Breton steel industry between 1945 and 2001 The Sydney Steel Works is at the heart of this story having existed in tandem with Cape Breton s larger coal operations since the early twentieth century The book explores the multifaceted nature of deindustrialization the internal politics of the steelworkers union the successful efforts to nationalize the mill in 1967 the years in transition under public ownership and the confrontations over health safety and environmental degradation in the 1990s and 2000s Closing Sysco moves beyond the moment of closure to trace the cultural historical and political ramifications of deindustrialization that continue to play out in post industrial Cape Breton Island A significant intervention into the international literature on deindustrialization this study pushes scholarship beyond the bounds of political economy and cultural change to begin tackling issues of bodily health environment and historical memory in post industrial places The experiences of the men and women who were displaced by the decline and closure of Sydney Steel are central to this book Featuring interviews with former steelworkers office employees managers politicians and community activists these one on one conversations reveal both the human cost of industrial closure and the lingering after effects of deindustrialization
