Who The Hell Is Juliette:

The Independent Film & Video Monthly, 1998      30th International Film Festival of India '99, 1999      US/Mexico Business, 1997      CITYSCAPES B.W. Williams, 2024-08-20

The World Health Organization estimates that half of the world's population is currently living in cities and will continue to climb. Cities are often vilified in many stories as concrete jungles, slums, or seem terrifying to many. Thomas Jefferson believed that the strength and future of America lay in its rural heritage and that cities were anathema to this concept. Perhaps the truth is that they are a culmination and reflection of the best and worst in our society. Cities are by their very nature split personalities: Wasteful and ecoconscious, Chaotic in appearance but concerned about efficiency, economies of scale, and marshalling the resources required to house, feed, clothe, educate, and move masses of people back and forth from home to work and play. Many cities are also unique in that people gravitate toward them as centers of cultures and learning. The theme of this collection of urban short stories and poems revolves around life in the city during four seasons. In the section outlined, Spring, for example, I start with an ode to New York, a poem dedicated to the city and its vibrancy, celebrating the dawn of something new and fresh. In the Fall section, on the other hand, I make historical reference to events of September 11th, 2001, in the poem Big Brothers. In between, the thematic expression of urban life and its experiences during the different seasons is laid out, sometimes metaphorically, as in the poem Shadow of Wings, which represents summer travel and freedom from the routines of life, and at times literally, as is in the short story South Station, where the main scene is played out in the winter.

Summers With Juliette Emily Madden, 2016-01-01

No matter where, no matter when, no matter what. Almost twenty years ago, on a beautiful coastal cliff, Juliette Cole, Anna Kendall, and Sera Di Maggio linked pinkies and made a vow to be there for each other, no matter what might happen in their lives. Now Juliette is calling in, terminally ill, she wants her two friends to come back to Ellesmere to help her through her last summer. The trouble is, Anna and Sera haven't spoken in years, and Anna hasn't returned home since she and her mother were run out of town in disgrace. But Anna and Sera do have one thing in common: they want Juliette to fight her cancer by any means possible. When they realize the only way may be to find a man called Noah, they reluctantly agree to put aside their differences and search for him. But as Anna and Sera discover, sometimes facing the past is the best way to face the future, and perhaps the only way they will find the strength for their last summer with Juliette. □□□□□□□□□□, 1998
