The Structure Of Science Education:

The structure of science education ,1975 Studies in the Structure of Science Teaching P. H. Taylor, Progressing Science Education Keith S. Taber,2009-05-29 Exploring one of the central themes in science education theory this volume examines how science education can be considered as a scientific activity within a broad post positivist notion of science Many students find learning science extremely problematic whatever level of education they have reached At the end of the 1970s a new approach to tackling learning difficulties in science was developed drawing on ideas from psychology and cognitive science and centred on the way students build up new knowledge in reference to their existing ideas Constructivism became the dominant paradigm in science education research for two decades spawning a vast body of literature reporting aspects of learners ideas in different science topics However Constructivism came under fire as it was recognised that the research did not offer immediate and simple prescriptions for effective science teaching The whole approach was widely criticised in particular by those who saw it as having anti science leanings In this book the notion of scientific research programmes is used to understand the development limitations and potential of constructivism It is shown that constructivist work in science education fits into a coherent programme exploring the contingencies of learning science The author goes further to address criticisms of constructivism evaluate progress in the field and suggest directions for future research It is concluded that constructivism has provided the foundations for a progressive research programme that continues to guide enquiry into learning and teaching science Modelling-based Teaching in Science Education John K. Gilbert,Rosária Justi,2016-05-30 This book argues that modelling should be a component of all school curricula that aspire to provide authentic science education for all The literature on modelling is reviewed and a model of modelling is proposed The conditions for the successful implementation of the model of modelling in classrooms are explored and illustrated from practical experience The roles of argumentation visualisation and analogical reasoning in successful modelling based teaching are reviewed The contribution of such teaching to both the learning of key scientific concepts and an understanding of the nature of science are established Approaches to the design of curricula that facilitate the progressive grasp of the knowledge and skills entailed in modelling are outlined Recognising that the approach will both represent a substantial change from the content transmission approach to science teaching and be in accordance with current best practice in science education the design of suitable approaches to teacher education are discussed Finally the challenges that modelling based education pose to science education researchers advanced students of science education and curriculum design teacher educators public examiners and textbook designers are all outlined Science Education Research and Practices in Taiwan Mei-Hung Chiu,2015-08-04 This book highlights the development and outcomes of research on and practical experience in science education in Taiwan As the outcomes of the scholarship on science education in Taiwan have garnered attention in science education communities around the world this book gathers the most relevant research on Taiwan presenting it in a cohesive overview that will move science education forward in terms of policy research and practice
