muddy water in the old pieces d eau and dunghills on the old parterres The feature is the contents of the loggia a vaulted roof and walls decorated by Giulio Eomano exquisite stucco work and still brilliant frescos arabesques and figurines nymphs and fauns animals and flowers gracefully lavish designs of every sort Much of the color especially the blues is still almost vivid and all the work is wonderfully ingenious elegant and charming Apartments so decorated can have been meant only for the recreation of great people people for whom life was impudent ease and success Margaret Farnese was the lady of the house but where she trailed her cloth of gold the chickens now scamper between your legs over rotten straw It is all inexpressibly dreary A stupid peasant scratching his head a couple of critical Americans picking their steps the walls tattered and befouled breast high dampness and decay striking in on your heart and the scene overbowed by these heavenly frescos mouldering there in their airy artistry It s poignant it provokes tears it tells so of the waste of effort Something human seems to pant beneath the gray pall of time and to implore you to rescue it to pity it to stand by it somehow But you leave it to its lingering death without compunction almost with pleasure for the place seems vaguely crime haunted paying at least the penalty of some hard immorality The end of a Eenaissance casino The didactic observer may take it as a symbol of the eventual destiny of the House of Pleasure February 12th Yesterday to the Villa Albani Over formal and as my companion says
