

partial than ourselves? While we regard the rights of the slave, and pity him, should we feel we pay for the sin of the slave, when, perhaps, we had no agency in increasing the saddest possession of such wretched property? That slavery is a sin, in the eye of Christianity, and in the eye of humanity, will never allow; but when it exists it is a legalized sin, and it lies at the door of those who have made the law. We say, by God's blessing, we ministers of an impartial gospel, do much in communicating these enlightening truths, which, when universally known, will give freedom to all men.

"Take heed to thyself," is an apostolic injunction. Every young minister is advised to have a careful eye on himself. We have no mission who can inflict on us such deadly wounds, as those we are in danger of receiving from our own imprudence. — Will ye be that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?"

It seems evident, that God has called last here, if any, to labor in the industry of universal education, who are rich in temporal means of a liberal education. Our churches are, therefore, generally
