The Space Enterprise George Harry Stine, 1980 Improving Acquisition to Support the Space Enterprise Vision Yool Kim, Guy Weichenberg, Frank Camm, Thomas C. Whitmore, 2020-09-15 The Space Enterprise Vision SEV developed jointly by Air Force Space Command AFSPC and the National Reconnaissance Office in 2015 describes an integrated approach to building a force across all space mission areas coupling the delivery of space capabilities with the ability to defend space capabilities Achieving this vision requires reducing acquisition time lines and improving integration of the space enterprise Given that the SEV requires a departure from the way space systems are currently acquired AFSPC headquarters and Space and Missile Systems Center SMC asked RAND Project AIR FORCE PAF to assess key barriers to realizing the SEV and recommend ways to overcome those barriers to help achieve the SEV goals The research team examined a range of potential approaches to support the goals of the SEV based on a literature review and semistructured interviews with acquisition subject matter experts and sponsor guidance PAF identified several promising alternative acquisition approaches that merit in depth examination in this project modular open system architectures MOSA agile acquisition rapid prototyping These concepts are not new but implementing them in a Department of Defense DoD setting is challenging for a variety of reasons Therefore the examination focuses on likely challenges to implementation and recommendations to overcome them to improve the likelihood of success should these acquisition approaches have a role in the SEV Each of these acquisition approaches can be implemented independently but there are instances in which they may be used synergistically as illustrated in the body of the report Space Enterprise Phillip Harris, 2009-12-29 In Space Enterprise Living and Working Offworld Dr Philip Harris provides the vision and rationale as to why humanity is leaving its cradle Earth to use space resources as well as pursuing lunar industrialization and establishing offworld settlements As a management space psychologist Dr Harris presents a behavioral science perspective on space exploration and enterprise In this his 45th book Phil has completely revised and updated the two previous editions of this classic placing new emphasis on the need for more synergy and participation by the private sector He not only provides a critical review of what is happening in the global space community but offers specific strategies for lunar economic development The author analyzes the human factors in contemporary and future space developments especially relative to the deployment of people aloft This user friendly volume offers numerous photographs diagrams exhibits and case studies Charting the Course ,1989 Space Enterprise David Gump, 1990 Outlines the parameters for the development and growth of a new space industry fueled by the competitiveness of private enterprise SPACE ENTERPRISE. DAVID. DIETZLER, 2021 Sustaining Our Space Enterprise Wayne J. Smith, Army War College (U.S.), 2009 Since the inception of an official U S Space Program in 1958 by the National Aeronautics and Space Act efforts to develop, deploy and maintain U S capabilities and assets in space expanded to include civil, military, intelligence and commercial organizations. Consequently, no single agency or department provides oversight and guidance on the billions of dollars allocated annually for space programs. Although a space policy exists which provides general guidance and direction, the U S lacks a coordinated space strategy to establish a unity of effort among the various departments and agencies supporting our National Security Space Enterprise (NSSE). This paper focuses on the NSSE, specifically the people that lead and manage it, and the lack of a National Space Strategy to provide it unity of effort. The paper provides a brief history of U S space programs and the national policy that guides it to help frame the issues. It then elaborates on how the lack of a consolidated and overarching space strategy negatively impacts the future of the NSSE and discusses concerns regarding the cadre of space professionals required to meet the challenges of a rapidly changing environment and recommends possible solutions.

The Future of the Space Industry Roger Handberg, 1995-08-24. For more casual observers, the overview of the currents in space commerce history will be invaluable in identifying space related economic opportunities and will enable those more experienced in the field to re-evaluate their future.

Space Science for the 21st Century: The Space Science Enterprise Strategic Plan, 1995. Annual Report Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, 1911. Reviving SpaceCRAF Geoff Cohan, 2020. The United States has a resilience problem in space. The current US national security space architecture is composed of relatively few technological masterpieces that are just as vulnerable as they are exquisite. These satellites and their associated ground systems are engineering miracles; they represent some of the most advanced technology ever devised. But due to the small numbers of these assets in orbit and their many links and nodes that are accessible to adversaries, these systems are also very susceptible to kinetic and non-kinetic attacks. The US military and intelligence community (IC) understand these vulnerabilities but they have been slow to build this critical resilience into the space domain. As Chief of Space Operations General Jay Raymond has recently stated, space superiority is not a birthright; it must be earned. Meanwhile, the US commercial space sector is in the midst of an exponential growth in capability. Indeed, most innovation today, unlike that of two generations ago, takes place in the commercial sector, not government labs. General Howell Estes III, former Commander of US Space Command (USSPACECOM), foresaw this shift over two decades ago. It is not the future of military space that is critical to the United States; it is the continued commercial development of space that will provide continued strength for our great country in the decades ahead. The US commercial space industry is rapidly developing, launching and operating increasingly advanced space systems that provide remote sensing imaging and radio frequency RF spectrum analysis communications SATCOM broadband internet and space surveillance SSA services to users throughout the world Commercial breakthroughs in debris removal and on orbit servicing are further expanding these private space industry markets and creating more opportunities for business Introduction The Industrial Enterprise ,1918 Proceedings of Space ... ,2002 The enterprise Hugh Ronald Conyngton,1923
