Theism In An Age Of Science:

God in the Age of Science? Herman Philipse, 2012-02-23 Herman Philipse puts forward a powerful new critique of belief in God. He examines the strategies that have been used for the philosophical defence of religious belief and by careful reasoning casts doubt on the legitimacy of relying on faith instead of evidence and on probabilistic arguments for the existence of God. Theism in an Age of Science Phillip H. Wiebe, 1988-01-19 Examines the grounds upon which theistic belief might be justified as a reasonable theory. The Judaeo-Christian religious belief system is used for purposes of illustration. It is argued that this system can be construed as one in which theoretical entities identified as gods are posited in order to account for unique events which appear to be otherwise inexplicable. Recent work in philosophy dealing with the structure of theories positing theoretical entities is surveyed in developing this position. God is viewed as acquiring its meaning by the role the supposed referent plays in relation to events in human experience. Religion in an Age of Science Ian G. Barbour, 2013-04-09 A comprehensive examination of the major issues between science and religion in today's world. Religion in an Age of Science Edwin Arthur Burt, 1929 Religion and Science Ian G. Barbour, 2013-02-12 Religion and Science is the definitive contemporary discussion of the many issues surrounding our understanding of God and religious truth in this scientific age. Ian Barbour, winner of the 1999 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion for his pioneering role in establishing the study of religion and science, explores many occasions where the relationship between the two was especially antagonistic. From physics in the sixteenth century to biology in the Victorian Era, Religion and Science is a fascinating exploration of two conflicting yet at times interdependent schools of thought. Ian Barbour is Professor Emeritus of Physics and Religion at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn. He was named the winner of the 1999 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion for his pioneering role in establishing the study of religion and science. He donated the $1.42 million prize to the Berkeley Center for the Study of Theology and Science and to Carleton College. He is the author of many books, including Religion and Science, Ethics in an Age of Technology, and Religion in an Age of Science. Masterful in scope, balanced in perspective, rich in detail, and full of intellectual passion, Religion and Science is a generation to come anyone setting out to explore the subtle relationships between science, religion, ethics, and technology will begin with Barbour as the guide. Religious Studies Review Why theism must evolve in the age of science Philip Clayton, 2010 Issues in Science and Religion Ian G. Barbour, 1966 First published 1966. Includes index. Includes bibliographical references. Campion Collection Theism in an Age of Science Phillip H. Belief in God in an Age of Science John Polkinghorne,1998-03-30 John Polkinghorne is a major figure in today s debates over the compatibility of science and religion Internationally known as both a theoretical physicist and a theologian the only ordained member of the Royal Society Polkinghorne brings unique qualifications to his inquiry into the possibilities of believing in God in an age of science In this thought provoking book the author focuses on the collegiality between science and theology contending that these intellectual cousins are both concerned with interpreted experience and with the quest for truth about reality He argues eloquently that scientific and theological inquiries are parallel The book begins with a discussion of what belief in God can mean in our times Polkinghorne explores a new natural theology and emphasizes the importance of moral and aesthetic experience and the human intuition of value and hope In other chapters he compares science s struggle to understand the nature of light with Christian theology s struggle to understand the nature of Christ He addresses the question Does God act in the physical world And he extends his ideas about the role of chaos theory surveys the prospects for future dialogue between scientific and theological thinkers and defends a critical realist understanding of the activities of both disciplines Polkinghorne concludes with a consideration of the nature of mathematical truths and the links between the complementary realities of physical and mental experience
