Politics of the Theological Barry Harvey, 1995 What is the primary purpose of Christian theology What governs its deliberations and sets the standards by which its claims are evaluated In Politics of the Theological Barry Harvey argues that politics the art and science of human life in community provides the essential framework for answering these foundational questions According to Harvey the church is the community that models a new type of society to the world ordered around the habits and relations of Christ Theological inquiry helps the church to foster relationships that embody the divine offer of new life and challenge the dehumanizing practices of modern culture The realization of this new society in the Christian community becomes for all creation the historical sign of God's peaceable kingdom

Christ, Providence and History Mike Higton, 2004-10-12 Higton draws on unpublished material in the Frei archives to present an original interpretation of Frei's theology He places Frei's well-known work on biblical hermeneutics firmly in the context of his theological wrestling with Barth and of the dominant traditions of Western Protestant theology He portrays

Frei as a theologian fundamentally concerned with the ability of theology to speak about and to the public world and to regard that world as providentially ordered in Jesus Christ without diminishing its concrete contingency and freedom Frei emerges as not just a powerful historian of theology but also as a persuasive and hitherto largely unrecognized theologian of history
