Odom, 2015 Mills and textiles are a important part of the history of the South and Greenville known as the Textile Capital of the World played a key role Greenville s textile heritage is what made the community the economic force it is today From its antebellum beginnings with only a handful of mills Greenville continued to grow industrially as more and more Northern investors saw financial opportunity in the area With its notable feats such as having the largest textile mill under one roof to its many mills fighting off flying squadrons during the General Textile Strike of 1934 the county s textile past is as rich and colorful as the fabrics it produced Greenville's ascension to the Textile Capital of the World was unfortunately followed by the flood of overseas goods resulting in the closing of many Upstate institutions Though these mills are now silent their efforts are what attracted so many other industries to the area Official Basket Ball Rules ,1930 Learning to Win Pamela Grundy,2003-04-03 Over the past century high school and college athletics have grown into one of America's most beloved and most controversial institutions inspiring great loyalty while sparking fierce disputes In this richly detailed book Pamela Grundy examines the many meanings that school sports took on in North Carolina linking athletic programs at state universities public high schools women's colleges and African American educational institutions to social and economic shifts that include the expansion of industry the advent of woman suffrage and the rise and fall of Jim Crow Drawing heavily on oral history interviews Grundy charts the many pleasures of athletics from the simple joy of backyard basketball to the exhilaration of a state championship run She also explores conflicts provoked by sports within the state clashes over the growth of college athletics the propriety of women's competition and the connection between sports and racial integration for example Within this chronicle familiar athletic narratives take on new meanings moving beyond timeless stories of courage fortitude or failure to illuminate questions about race manhood and womanhood the purpose of education the meaning of competition and the structure of American society The Official National Collegiate Athletic Association Basketball Guide ,1929 Textile World Walter S. south bringing with it the tradition of a mill village usually owned by the mill's owner where the workers and their families lived. The new game of baseball quickly became a foundation of mill village life. A rich tradition of textile league baseball in South Carolina is here reconstructed from newspaper accounts and interviews with former players and fans. Players such as Shoeless Joe Jackson and Champ Summers made their marks as linemen in these semipro leagues. The fierce rivalries between competing mills and the impact of the teams on mill life are recounted. Appendices list club records and rosters for many of the teams from 1880 through 1955.

Cotton Mill People of the Piedmont Marjorie Adella Potwin, 1927 Presents recorded observations of mill villages confined mostly to the central Piedmont region extending from Danville, Virginia to Gainesville, Georgia, with more intensive observation made of the cotton mill people in and near Spartanburg, South Carolina. Specifically addresses population, elements, social institutions, and organizations, aspects of social legislation, and occupational conditions of the cotton mill people.

America's Textile Reporter, 1920

Textile Town Betsy Wakefield Teter, 2002 In 1816 a pair of Rhode Island brothers stopped their wagons along South Carolina's Tyger River, cleared away trees and chinquapin thickets, and began construction on a rustic spinning factory. From those humble beginnings arose one of the nation's mightiest textile communities, a place that by the end of the 19th century became known as the Lowell of the South. Over the course of nearly two centuries, more than 100,000 people labored in the red brick cotton mills and modern textile factories of Spartanburg County, South Carolina. Textile Town is their story. One part historical narrative, one part scrapbook, one part encyclopedia, this illustrated volume presents the voices of scholars and blue collar workers side by side in an exploration of this complex and compelling saga.

Working in Libraries and Mill Villages more than 40 writers and historians, many of them sons, daughters, and grandchildren of textile workers, contributed to this engaging history. From the great migration from the mountains in the 1880s to the labor conflict of the 1930s to the wartime camaraderie of the 1940s and beyond, Textile Town tells a seminal Southern story, one that readers won't soon forget.
