Lifespan Development

What is Human Development?
→ The scientific study of processes of change and stability
→ The study of human development seeks to describe, explain, predict, and, when appropriate, intervene in development.

What are the goals of the field of human development?
→ Describe behavior - the observation and measurement of behavior and mental process
  ● Anything you can directly observe and measure
  ● Can't observe mental processing (thinking, feeling, sensing, perceiving); make assumptions based on behavior
→ Explain behavior - explanation of what the data means
  ● Theroize data; give coherent and integrated set of assumptions and propositions that explain data
→ Predict behavior
  ● Forecasting of later development based on current or prior development
    ○ A good theory will be predictive
→ Intervene - use knowledge to promote welfare of individuals across the lifespan
  ● Applications to understand why people do what they do

Aspects of Development
→ Physical
  ● Changes in body, brain, sensory capacity, and motor skills
→ cognitive/intellectual
  ● How we learn, memory, reasoning, thinking, language
→ Psychological (personality and social)
  ● What makes an individual unique, general characteristics, how one expresses themselves
  ● How you interact with others

Influences on human development
→ Heredity = inborn traits or characteristics inherited from biological parents (nature)
→ Environment = everything else! The totality of nonhereditary or experiential influences on development
→ Not nature OR nurture (nature AND nurture)
→ Your development is the result of a blending or interaction of nature and nurture
→ You shape your environment
→ Maturation - the unfolding of a natural sequence of physical and behavioral changes

Contextual influences on development: Family
→ Nuclear: one or two parents and their biological, adopted, or step-children
→ Extended: multigenerational kinship network
→ Subjective: definitions of family
  ● Family signifies "the subjective meaning of intimate connections rather than formal, objective blood or marriage ties."
  ● "A family is a group of people who have intimate social relationships and have a history together."

Others in your microsystem
→ Microsystem = individuals with whom you have face to face contact
