of career education as a vital means to enhance vocationalization in an authentic sense. The book basically focuses on the need to re-structure the system and proposes the use of productive learning as a foundation for a well-rounded education that breaks down the dreadfully despicable dualisms of contemporary education that is the separation of theory from practice, individuals from collectivity and schools from community. It also aims at exposing students to three viable requirements: the need for effective acquisition of skills, a critical pedagogy of occupational demands, and proper understanding of the potential resources for community development and prosperity. The implication is that creative activities, productive behavior should move away from the single priority of economic advancement and profit toward the integration of developmental objectives for social and economic enlistment and effective mobilization.

Study Skills Steve Piscitelli, 2009. Are students doing what is required to get them where they want to go? This book gets students to ask and answer this vital question. Written by a master teacher, the 2nd edition of Study Skills: Do I Really Need This Stuff? makes potentially difficult and dry subject matter come alive by integrating two critical themes for student and life success: critical thinking and personal choice. Each study skill is introduced and built on specific standards of critical thinking, and then the reader immediately practices the study skills they need for academic success. The second theme, personal choice, reinforces responsible decision making and follow-through to put potential and ambition into action. Ambition is the desire, potential is the ability, initiative is the doing. Effective study skills will empower students to do what is needed to master their course requirements, and this book will provide the necessary tools.
