

The CERTAINTY Of FAITH

The timeliness of this book, first published in 1901, is shown by the fact that a recent book (The Course of the Church in an Horizontalistic Age by B. Wentzel) begins with a lengthy quote from it. The Certainty of Faith is one of the small but powerful classics written by one of the greatest theologians Holland has ever produced.

Ours is an age of dialectical man: the highest form of courage and honesty is to never find the truth, to claim ever to be on one's way toward it. No time has been more in need of the reminder that "certainty is the normal, natural condition of the spirit as health is of the body." Bavinck calls doubt the sickness of our age.

In this succinct, clearly argued little volume Bavinck first examines the difference between the certainty of science and that of religion. Then he reviews several ways certainty has been sought historically. In the final and longest chapter he shows the indispensable role certainty plays in the Christian faith and religion.
