

DO CARPENTER BEES STING?

MALE CARPENTER BEES DON'T HAVE A STINGER

Male carpenter bees are generally harmless but will act aggressive to protect their home. They will dive bomb anything they think is a threat in hopes that their loud buzzing will scare the threat away.

BUT FEMALE CARPENTER BEES DO

Female carpenter bees do have a protective stinger that is smooth. This means that they can sting their target multiple times. For someone with a bee allergy this can be an issue.

ARE CARPENTER BEES DANGEROUS?

Carpenter bees are typically docile unless threatened or provoked. They spend much of their time foraging for food and taking care of their eggs. If something threatens the nest, carpenter bees will go on the offensive and try to scare the threat away.

TREATING CARPENTER BEE STINGS

Luckily carpenter bee stingers are smooth so it is unlikely that the stinger is stuck inside the skin. The sting does release a painful venom that causes a burning and throbbing pain. Be sure to clean the sting site and use a cold compress to reduce swelling.

CARPENTER BEE ALLERGIES

The most dangerous aspect of a carpenter bee sting is if the stung individual has a severe allergic reaction. This could result in everything from breaking out in hives to difficulty breathing. The worst case scenario is the victim suffers from anaphylactic shock which would require an immediate EpiPen injection.

SIGNS OF CARPENTER BEES

Its best to avoid carpenter bees if possible so be sure to know the different signs of carpenter bee activity:

- Entry holes in exposed wood
- Sawdust around circular openings in exposed wood
- Hollow sounding wood
- Discolored wood around access points
