Global Environment and World Politics Elizabeth R. DeSombre, 2005-01-01 Politically the world is composed of states Environmentally the world is made up of ecosystems This disconnection between ecological and political systems makes addressing environmental issues at the global level both more difficult and more necessary This volume examines how we should set about addressing the problems that face the environment internationally The field of international environmental politics draws on a variety of academic traditions It uses international relations theory to look at the concerns and actions of states but it also uses variety of new perspectives to explain issues that are unique to the study of the environment Elizabeth DeSombre explores four important approaches to the field international environmental cooperation the relationship between the environment and security the issues of science uncertainty and risk and the role of non state actors She explores these approaches with the help of case studies on specific problems facing the global environment focusing in particular on ozone depletion and global climate change the politics of whaling the protection of Amazonian biodiversity and acid rain in Europe and North America United States Code United States,2018 ABC Pol Sci ,2000 Cooperation Among the Lithuanians in the United States of America... Fabian S. Duffy,2003 Organizations such as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth are familiar to anyone with an interest in environmental protection As activist groups they played by the same rules for years But in 1994 the rules changed With the Republican takeover of Congress environmental groups faced sweeping changes in federal policies that threatened the enforcement of environmental laws As these organizations intensified their efforts to meet these challenges they also altered their electoral strategies and political spending patterns This book traces those actions and shows what they mean for the future of environmentalism in the political arena While environmental advocacy groups have become bigger and better funded in recent years so have the corporate interests that compete with them for the attention of public and politicians The Green Agenda in American Politics offers a new look at environmental advocacy that focuses on contemporary lobbying electioneering and agenda setting in this new context Drawing on interviews with activists from a wide range of organizations Robert Duffy describes what environmental groups actually do when lobbying officials or the public He examines activity at both national and state levels to emphasize their growing use of websites email and action alert networks to conduct more sophisticated grassroots campaigns and he shows how they are devoting more funds to unregulated forms of spending such as independent expenditure issue advocacy advertising and public education campaigns Duffy also tracks emerging trends in interest group politics and provides an overview of activism through the early 1990s He then documents the emergence of more aggressive action after 1994 such as providing campaign services to candidates and mounting voter registration drives He also shows how state and local groups have begun to play more important roles in the wake of the rollback of federal environmental regulations Brimming with new insights into interest group lobbies in general and contemporary environmental groups in particular Duffy s book opens a new window on the influence of Big Money in the supposedly democratic electoral process American Cooperative Journal ,1909
