

General relativity

From the world learned of the revolutionary Special Theory of Relativity proposed by Albert Einstein and published in 1905, physics underwent its most revolutionary change since the days of Isaac Newton. Nevertheless, Einstein had yet another surprise left: the so-called General Theory of Relativity, of 1916—a much more complex and complete theory from which several interesting predictions arise and have been confirmed over time.

Why a second theory?

According to Einstein, the laws of physics are the same for all observers, but the way they are perceived is different. Einstein's theory of relativity is a generalization of Newton's theory of gravity, which is only valid in the case of weak gravitational fields. Einstein solved the problem of providing an theory by providing an equivalent principle.

A deformed universe

Einstein established that gravity was not a force, but rather the consequence of the deformation of space-time that any body with mass generates. Mass, when accumulating in a point, deforms the space around it, and objects do not move through that curved deformation.

The most characteristic prediction of general relativity is the bending of light rays.

Light that bends

Perhaps the most surprising confirmation of one of Einstein's predictions, based on the General Theory of Relativity, happened in 1919 during the course of a solar eclipse.

According to the general theory of relativity, the light rays from the stars are deflected by the gravitational field of the sun. This deflection is more pronounced when the sun is closer to the observer, and it is more pronounced when the sun is closer to the observer.

In 1919, during a solar eclipse, the deflection of light rays from the stars was observed. This deflection was more pronounced when the sun was closer to the observer, and it was more pronounced when the sun was closer to the observer.

4 dimensions

For the universe according to Einstein's theory, although the space is three-dimensional, time is also a dimension, and together they form a four-dimensional spacetime.

Gravitational lenses

Another prediction based on the General Theory of Relativity concerns gravitational lenses. Because of the deformation of space-time, the light rays from distant galaxies are deflected by the mass of certain galaxies and galaxies, and this causes the light to be focused.

The light rays from the source galaxy are deflected by the gravity of the lens galaxy, focusing them towards the observer on Earth.

The light rays from the source galaxy are deflected by the gravity of the lens galaxy, focusing them towards the observer on Earth.

ALBERT EINSTEIN

The most important prediction of the theory is the bending of light rays. This prediction was confirmed during the course of a solar eclipse in 1919. The deflection of light rays from the stars was observed, and this deflection was more pronounced when the sun was closer to the observer, and it was more pronounced when the sun was closer to the observer.

Electromagnetic waves

Einstein proposed that in intense gravitational fields, light rays are deflected. This deflection is more pronounced when the sun is closer to the observer, and it is more pronounced when the sun is closer to the observer.

Perturbation of Mercury's orbit

Astronomers had discovered a discrepancy in the orbital motion of the planet Mercury that could not be explained by Newton's theory of gravity. Einstein's theory of relativity provided a solution to this problem.
