Right Ventricle Pathology

Right ventricular failure (RVF) is a condition in which the right ventricle is unable to pump enough blood to the lungs. This can lead to a variety of symptoms, including shortness of breath, fatigue, and swelling in the legs. RVF is often caused by left ventricular failure, which leads to a backup of blood in the right ventricle. Other causes of RVF include pulmonary hypertension, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), and certain medications. RVF is a serious condition that can lead to death if not treated. Treatment for RVF includes medications to improve heart function, diuretics to reduce fluid retention, and oxygen therapy. In severe cases, a heart transplant may be necessary.
