

THE BRIDGE BUILDERS.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

1900-1901

THE least that Findlayson, of the Public Works Department, expected was a C.I.F.—he even dreamed of a C.S.E.—and his friends told him that he deserved even more. For three years he had endured heat and cold, responsibility almost too heavy for one pair of shoulders; and day by day, through that time, the great Koohi Bridge over the Ganges had grown under his charge. Now, in less than three months, if all went well, his Excellency the Viceroy would open the bridge in state, and the Archibishop would bless it, and there would be speeches.

Findlayson, C.E., sat in his trolley on a construction line that ran along one of the main arteries—the huge stone-faced banks that flared away north and south for three miles on either side of the river—and permitted himself to think of the end. With its approaches his work was one mile and three-quarters in length; a lattice-girder bridge, composed with the Findlayson truss, standing on seven-and-twenty brick piers. Each one of those piers was twenty-four feet in diameter, capped with red granite and sunk thirty feet below the shifting sand of the Ganges' bed. Above them was a railway and fifteen feet broad. Above that again a carriage of eighteen feet, flanked with footpaths of four and half feet. At either end rose towers of red brick, equipped for machinery and provided for big cranes, and the ramp of the road was being pushed forward to their haunches. The raw earth ends were crawling and alive with hundreds upon hundreds of tiny asses climbing out of the yawning borrow-pit below with loads of stuff, and the hot afternoon air was filled with the noise of horses, the rattle of the drivers' sticks, and the wail and roll-down of the dirt. The river was very low, and on the dazzling white sand between the three central piers stood great crabs of railway-shoppers, filled within and dashed without with mud, to support the last of the girders as these were riveted up. In the little deep water that was left an overboard crane unrolled its coil five along its axle-pole, jerking sections of iron into place, scurrying and barking and grunting as an elephant grunts in the timber-yard. Riveters by the hundred swarmed about the lattice side-work and the iron roof of the railway lines, being from invisible staging under the bellies of the girders, clustered round the throats of the piers, and rode on the over-hang of the footpath stanchions; their fire-pots and the sparks of flame that accompanied each hammer stroke showing no more than pale yellow in the sun's glare. East and west and north and south the construction trains rattled and shrieked up and down the embankments, the piled tracks of brown and white stone heaping behind them till the side-banks were let go, and with a roar and a grumble a few thousand tons more material was thrown out to hold the river in place.

Findlayson, C.E., turned on his trolley and looked over the face of the country that he had changed for seven miles round about, he had back on the humming, noisy village of five thousand workmen, up stream and down, along the sides of rivers and canals; the river to the far piers, lowering in the heat; overhead to the guard-towers—and only he knew how strong those were—and saw with a sigh of contentment that his work was good. There was his bridge before him in the sunlight, looking only a few weeks' work on the girders of the three middle piers—his bridge, raw and ugly as original sin, but solid, permanent, to endure when all memory of the builder, yes, even of the splendid Findlayson truss, had perished. Practically, the thing was done.

Hitchcock, his assistant, entered along the line on a little switch-tailed K-bull pony which through practice could have trotted over a rough road and walked to his chief.

"All but," he said, with a smile, said the senior.

"Not half a bad job for two men." "One—and a half. God, what a Cooper's Hill ride I was when I came on the works!" Hitchcock felt very old in the crowded experiences of the past three years, that had taught him power and responsibility.

"You were rather a colt," said Findlayson. "I wonder how you'll like going back to office work when this job's over."

"Hate it!" said the young man, and as he went on his eye followed Findlayson's, and he muttered, "Isn't it damned good?"

"I think we'll go up the service together," Findlayson said to himself. "You're too good a youngster to waste on another man. Give them credit; assistant does art. Personal assistant, and of course, they shall be, if there's any credit to me out of the business!"

Indeed, the burden of the work had fallen altogether on Findlayson and his assistant, the young man whom he had chosen by reason of his readiness to break to his own goals. There were half-a-dozen contractors by the half-hundred—fitters and riveters, Europeans, borrowed from the railway workshops and perhaps twenty white and half-caste subordinates in direct, under direction, the levies of workmen—but none knew better than these two, who trusted each other, how the underlings were not to be trusted. They had been tried many times in sudden crises—by slipping of horses, by breaking of tackle, failure of cranes, and the wrath of the river—but no stress had brought to light any man among men

Cumby,2014-02-05 Every moment of your journey toward home is a moment to appreciate Some people believe and support the quote above and some adamantly disagree I have found however instead of looking back at the bridges you crossed and the past failures in life think on where you have come and where you are now I said Think but don t reflect and dwell on them If you look at how far you have to go and how many bridges you have to cross before declaring your life a success then you will find yourself doubting your worth and criticizing the decisions you have made in getting to this very moment in your life Every moment you spend criticizing and doubting your worth is a moment you have wasted Be careful don t wish or throw one moment of your life away The poem The Bridge Builder by Will Allen Dromgoole stressed the importance of leaving a legacy of character building skills and moral lessons for the next generation At least that is the logical inference one would make when the poem is read and taken to heart The poem has become a favorite of business and religious motivational speakers throughout the years As I have reflected on the poem and its meaning I have come to the conclusion that bridge building is an important tool in one s tool chest of living life Whether it is a bridge that offers a traveler a means of getting to where his destination is taking him or a bridge that offers a means of protection in the storms of life bridge building is a rewarding accomplishment as we travel life s highway to our final destination In my first book The Bridge Builder 2012 the reader was introduced to my dad and mom Jay and Edna Glynn Bill Cumby These two wonderful people enlightened the world in which they lived They were real bridge builders and shining examples for their children and others who came across their bridges and paths in life This book The Bridge Builder Bracing for Life s Challenges is a continuing story of my dad mom and other bridge builders who hold a special place in my heart How I handle issues today is influenced by the ethical values and character traits of these special ones whom I have been privileged to know as bridge builders I pray that you the reader will get a close up glimpse of these gentle giants as they lived life and have now crossed the bridge into glory with their Creator All of the stories told in this writing are great counseling tools for the young and the not so young Parents will love the idea of reading to their children these life experiences from the memories of a son who learned from wise and responsible parents as he traveled on the highway of life My joy in writing is to know that some laughed a little and some cried a little as they walked through life with me The experiences told in the book are true however the experiences are told in light of how I remembered them and how they affected me at the time As I reflect on them now I see that they provided structure and foundational truths that have helped me to live life to the fullest All the experiences have helped me to see the importance of my relationship with my God my family and the dear friends and acquaintances who have encouraged me to live my life with joy and contentment to the very end Enjoy the book and make sure you take to heart those experiences that will help you to live the abundant life In life learn to wiggle giggle smile cry and eat your favorite ice cream cone even if you are on your way to a funeral There are only two ways to live your life One is as though nothing is a miracle The other is as though everything is a miracle Albert Einstein When the time comes for you to leave this earth if it doesn t become a lesser place with your absence then you have wasted your life Shaun Hick The Army of Five Men The Bridge Builders Post and Courier (Charleston, S.C. : Daily),2005 The Bridge Builders Peter Stackpole,1984 The Bridge Builders Anna Chapin Ray,1909 The Bridgebuilders József Lengyel,1979 The Builders of the Bridge David Barnard Steinman,1945 Story of the builders of the Niagara Cincinnati and Brooklyn bridges The Roeblings Hamilton Schuyler,1931 The Bridge Builders Tony Bartelme,Jessica VanEqueren,2005-09-01 The Story of Construction of the new Arthur Rawenel Jr Bridge in Charleston 56 with 8 pages added of new content and photographs about the opening of the Bridge Kipling, the Story-writer Walter Morris Hart,1918 Ananda Coomaraswamy, the bridge builder: The monographs S.
