The Broken Promise of Agricultural Progress Cameron Muir, 2014-06-05 Food and the global agricultural system has become one of the defining public concerns of the twenty first century Ecological disorder and inequity is at the heart of our food system This thoughtful and confronting book tells the story of how the development of modern agriculture promised ecological and social stability but instead descended into dysfunction Contributing to knowledge in environmental cultural and agricultural histories it explores how people have tried to live in the aftermath of ecological imperialism The Broken Promise of Agricultural Progress An environmental history journeys to the dry inland plains of Australia where European ideas and agricultural technologies clashed with a volatile and taunting country that resisted attempts to subdue and transform it for the supply of global markets Its wide ranging narrative puts gritty local detail in its global context to tell the story of how cultural anxieties about civilisation population and race shaped agriculture in the twentieth century It ranges from isolated experiment farms to nutrition science at the League of Nations from local landholders to high profile moral crusaders including an Australian apricot grower who met Franklin D Roosevelt and almost fed the world This book will be useful to undergraduates and postgraduates on courses examining international comparisons of nineteenth and twentieth century agriculture and courses studying colonial development and settler societies It will also appeal to food concerned general readers

Migration and Performance in Contemporary Ireland Charlotte McIvor, 2016-10-10 This book investigates Ireland s translation of interculturalism as social policy into aesthetic practice and situates the wider implications of this new interculturalism for theatre and performance studies at large Offering the first full length post 1990s study of the effect of large scale immigration and interculturalism as social policy on Irish theatre and performance McIvor argues that inward migration changes most of what can be assumed about Irish theatre and performance and its relationship to national identity By using case studies that include theatre dance photography and activist actions this book works through major debates over aesthetic interculturalism in theatre and performance studies post 1970s and analyses Irish social interculturalism in a contemporary European social and cultural policy context Drawing together the work of professional and community practitioners who frequently identify as both artists and activists Migration and Performance in Contemporary Ireland proposes a new paradigm for the study of Irish theatre and performance while contributing to the wider investigation of migration and performance
