State Of The Art Fact Finding:

International Law and Fact-Finding in the Field of Human Rights Bertrand G. Ramcharan, 2014-09-25 Human rights fact finding is at the heart of efforts for the international protection of human rights Gross violations of human rights are still a tragic feature of life in many parts of the world and governments responsible for them go to great lengths to hide them from detection and to avoid international scrutiny When scrutiny does occur governments frequently attack fact finding reports to avoid further processes and the need to accept responsibility for the violations perpetrated For this and for many other reasons it is crucial that careful attention is paid to the substantive and methodological integrity of fact finding reports At the time of its original publication in 1982 this ground breaking volume sought to identify fundamental norms and standards which could help to guarantee the quality and integrity of fact finding reports A lot has happened in human rights fact finding since then There are numerous human rights fact finding rapporteurs within the United Nations system and within regional organizations there are many international commissions of inquiry international criminal tribunals have helped clarify various areas of the law NGOs are extremely active in the field Despite or perhaps because of these developments controversies over fact finding reports are very common A source of reference to help fact finders strengthen their work is sorely needed and this volume remains of inestimable value in that regard The guidance it provides has stood the test of time and is as valuable today as it was when it was first advanced arguably it is more valuable today when the need for objective standards of human rights fact finding has become of urgent importance in a world in which the political ground is shifting visibly The current volume is a re issued version of the original text with new introductory materials Fact-Finding before the International Court of Justice James Gerard Devaney, 2016-09-29 Fact Finding before the International Court of Justice examines a number of significant recent criticisms of the way in which the ICJ deals with facts The book takes the position that such criticisms are warranted and that the ICJ s current approach to fact finding falls short of adequacy both in cases involving abundant particularly complex or technical facts and in those involving a scarcity of facts The author skilfully examines how other courts such as the WTO and inter State arbitrations conduct fact finding and makes a number of select proposals for reform enabling the ICJ to address some of the current weaknesses in its approach The proposals include but are not limited to the development of a power to compel the disclosure of information greater use of provisional measures and a clear strategy for the use of expert evidence The ^A Transformation of Human Rights Fact-Finding Philip Alston, Sarah Knuckey, 2015-11-23 This book offers a multidisciplinary approach to the study of fact finding including rigorous and critical analysis of the field of practice as well as providing a range of accounts of what actually happens It aims to deepen the study and practice of human rights investigations and fosters fact finding as a discretely studied topic while mapping crucial transformations in the field Dispute Settlement in the Public Sector: The State of the Art United States.
