

From Common Reader to Canon: Memorialising the Shakespeare-Reading British Soldier During the First World War

Edmund G. C. King

In October 1916, the Shakespeare biographer Sir Sidney Lee wrote to The Times. He had just received a letter from a soldier serving ‘somewhere in France’. Seconding Lee’s observation, in an earlier letter to The Times, that military personnel attending London theatres wanted more than mere ‘futility and frivolity’, Lee’s soldier correspondent lamented the fact that ‘so many people seem to think there is no room or place for good drama’ during wartime. ‘This is my second autumn out here’, he told Lee, ‘and somehow I manage to cart around my Shakespeare’. Even when circumstances demanded that he leave his collected Shakespeare behind, he wrote, ‘my memory is fairly good and I browse there’.¹ Three years earlier, in his inaugural professorial lecture at East London College, Lee had urged his future students to take advantage of ‘these days of cheap reprints’ and form their own private libraries of classic works. Ending his address on a rousing note, he looked forward to a time when study and ‘right reading’ would enable them to ‘spread far and wide in the outer world the glad tidings of literature’s saving grace’.²
