The Captured Harvest:

Resource and Market Projections for Forest Policy Development Darius M. Adams, Richard W. Haynes, 2007-09-18 Figure 1.1 Post World War II US assessment history 1973 were motivated by the emerging conditions in the post World War II period between rapidly increasing softwood harvests and declining timber growth. These are called the Outlook Studies. The last six studies (1980, 1985, 1989, 1993, 2000, 2005) have been conducted to meet the requirements of the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act (RPA) of 1974. These are called the RPA Timber Assessments.

6 The Challenge of Developing Models

1.2 SHAPING THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

This initial chapter describes the development and specific structure of the Assessment System. We consider past policy analysis needs and federal legislative requirements, antecedent modeling and projection approaches, characteristics of the US forest sector, and recent trends in public and private resource management. At the federal level and in some states and regions, the USA has a lengthy history of using resource and market models to explore policy issues and to examine the effects of alternative policy actions. Many of these studies have been undertaken on an irregular basis as issues emerged and resource conditions changed. The RPA legislation mandated a regular cycle of nationwide assessments by the Forest Service, examining trends and conditions in an array of resource uses and services: climate, minerals, range, recreation, timber, and water.

The structure of the Assessment System reflects both the requirements of the RPA legislation and the unique characteristics of the US forest sector, which it is designed to simulate. In the years since enactment of the RPA legislation, management directions and objectives on both public and private lands in the USA have continued to evolve. The structure of the Assessment System has been adapted to reflect these trends.
