Thorstein Veblen (1857-1929) was an American economist and sociologist. He is well known as a witty critic of capitalism. Veblen is famous for the idea of conspicuous consumption. Veblen explains the concept in his best-known book, The Theory of the Leisure Class. Within the history of economic thought, Veblen is considered the leader of the institutional economics movement. Veblen's distinction between institutions and technology is still called the Veblenian dichotomy by contemporary economists.

The Engineers and the Price System Thorstein Veblen, 2017-03-09 One of the great thinkers of the early 20th century, American economist and sociologist THORSTEIN BUNDE VEBLEN (1857-1929) is best remembered for coining the phrase conspicuous consumption. But he also in this 1921 volume foresaw the rise of the scientist and the technologist as an economic power. Here he explains the conflict between the entrepreneur and the engineer, the new power of the technological craftsman in the industrial scheme, why any revolution in America would come from organized labor, and more.

THE ENGINEERS AND THE PRICE SYSTEM Thorstein

Veblen, 2024-01-10 Thorstein Veblen's The Engineers and the Price System presents an incisive critique of the capitalist economic structure highlighting the conflicting roles of engineers and industrialists. Through a combination of rigorous economic analysis and a unique sociological perspective, Veblen employs a distinctively analytical literary style to explore how the priorities of engineers who emphasize efficiency and innovation clash with the profit-driven motives of the market system. This tension reveals broader implications for modern industry and reflects Veblen's concerns regarding the detrimental impact of predatory capitalism on technological advancement and societal welfare. Veblen, a pioneering figure in the field of institutional economics, was profoundly influenced by his observations of industrial society at the turn of the 20th century. His background in sociology and economics allowed him to dissect the intricacies of social behavior and economic practices, providing valuable insights into the motivations that drive both engineers and capitalists. Veblen's earlier works, such as The Theory of the Leisure Class, set the stage for this profound exploration of the intersections between technology, engineering, and economic systems. This book is highly recommended for readers interested in economic theory, sociology, and the ongoing dialogue surrounding technological progress in a capitalist society. Veblen's thought-provoking arguments urge readers to reconsider the alignment of technological capabilities with market demands, making The Engineers and the Price System an essential read for anyone looking to grasp the complexities of modern industrial life. Excerpt VI A MEMORANDUM ON A PRACTICABLE SOVIET OF TECHNICIANS It is the purpose of this memorandum to show in an objective way that under existing circumstances there need be no fear and no hope of an effectual revolutionary overturn in America such as would unsettle the established order and unseat those Vested Interests that now control the country's industrial system. In an earlier paper The Dial October 4 it has been argued that no effectual move in the direction of such an overturn can be made except on the initiative and under the direction of the country's technicians taking action in common and on a concerted plan. Notoriously no move of this nature has been made hitherto nor is there evidence that anything of the kind has been contemplated by the technicians. They still are consistently loyal with something more than a hired man's loyalty to the established order of commercial profit and absentee ownership. And any adequate plan of concerted action such as would be required for the enterprise in question is not a small matter that can be arranged between two days. Any plan of action that shall hope to meet the requirements of the case in any passable fashion must necessarily have the benefit of mature deliberation among the technicians who are competent to initiate such an enterprise; it must engage the intelligent co-operation of several thousand technically trained men scattered over the face of the country in one industry; and another must carry out a passably complete cadastration of the country's industrial forces; must set up practicable organization tables covering the country's industry in some detail; energy resources, materials, and man power; and it must also engage the aggressive support of the Excerpt from The Engineers and the Price System: The following series of papers are reprinted from the Dial where they appeared from time to time during 1919. They discuss the American industrial situation as it stood at that time during the months immediately following the Armistice and more particularly certain difficulties involved in the industrial situation as it stood at that time. But since then no substantial change has taken effect in the state of industry of such a character as to make this discussion less pertinent now than it was at the time these papers were first printed; indeed the difficulties involved in or arising out of the industrial situation have only come forward into fuller bearing since then. Therefore these papers are here reprinted with outchange.

The Engineering-Business Nexus Steen Hyldgaard Christensen, Bernard Delahousse, Christelle Didier, Martin Meganck, Mike Murphy, 2018-11-14

Fascinating and compelling in equal measure, this volume presents a critical examination of the multilayered relationships between engineering and business. In so doing, the study also stimulates ethical reflection on how these relationships either enhance or inhibit strategies to address vital issues of our time. In the context of geopolitical, economic, and environmental tendencies, the authors explore the world that we should want to create and the role of the engineer and the business manager in this endeavor. Throughout this volume, the authors identify periods of alignment and periods of tension between engineering and business. They look at focal points of the engineering-business nexus related to the development of capitalism The book explores past and present movements to reshape reform or reject this nexus The volume is informed by questions of importance for industry as well as for higher education These are What kinds of conflict arise for engineers in their attempts to straddle both professional and organizational commitments How should professionals be managed to avoid a clash of managerial and professional cultures How do engineers create value in firms and corporations What kinds of tension exist between higher education and industry What challenges does the neoliberal entrepreneurial university pose for management faculty students society and industry Should engineering graduates be ready for work and can they possibly be What kinds of business issues are reflected in engineering education curricula and for what purpose Is there a limit to the degree of business hybridization in engineering degree programs and if so what would be the criterion for its definition Is there a place in engineering education curricula for reflective critique of assumptions related to business and economic thinking One ideal of management and control comes to the fore as the Anthropocene the world transformed into an engineered artefact which includes human existence The volume raises the question as to how engineering and business together should be considered given the fact that the current engineering business nexus remains embedded within an economic model of continual growth By addressing macro level issues such as energy policy sustainable development globalization and social justice this study will both help create awareness and stimulate development of self knowledge among practitioners educators and students thereby ultimately addressing the need for better informed citizens to safeguard planet Earth as a human life supporting system
