Knowing Global Environments brings together nine leading scholars whose work spans a variety of environmental and field sciences including archaeology agriculture botany climatology ecology evolutionary biology oceanography ornithology and tidology Collectively their essays explore the history of the field sciences through the lens of place practice and the production of scientific knowledge with a wide ranging perspective extending outwards from the local to regional national imperial and global scales The book also shows what the history of the field sciences can contribute to environmental history especially how knowledge in the field sciences has intersected with changing environments and addresses key present day problems related to sustainability such as global climate biodiversity oceans and more Contributors to Knowing Global Environments reveal how the field sciences have interacted with practical economic activities such as forestry agriculture and tourism as well as how the public has been involved in the field sciences as field assistants students and local collaborators

Fortnight ,1949      Drowning by Accident Elizabeth Meinhard, 2022-02-15 Drowning By Accident explains why it is so easy to drown where accidents happen and how to save lives by early rescue and resuscitation More than 600 people die by drowning in Britain every year Swimming is promoted as a particularly safe form of exercise so that swimmers forget or ignore the dangers of frigid lakes swollen rivers incoming tides or outgoing rip currents Drowning accidents take place because we don t recognise water as a hostile environment We overestimate the strength and endurance of our bodies and underestimate the power and deceptiveness of water Year after year victims lose their lives in typical drowning accidents often sinking so quickly and silently that nearby family friends and onlookers fail to notice the tragedy taking place close beside them Babies drown in baths Toddlers drown in garden ponds School children fall off rafts Teenagers strike too far from the shore Pensioners wade into rivers to save their dogs Victims often die within minutes of sinking beneath the surface A quarter of those who reach hospital alive will also die while others survive with severe permanent brain damage This means that it is vitally important for parents grandparents teachers lifeguards and lawmakers to recognise the risks and prevent drowning accidents before they take place

Increased public concern over the control of environmental forces and industrial hazards has led to awareness for the need for improved conditions for all who work Industry has expanded and developed new products and new methods A great many occupational diseases have accompanied this progress Too much of the present data and knowledge have been obtained following accidents or sad experience Thousands of women have died have become acutely or chronically ill and still others permanently disabled Workers themselves have become keenly aware of potential hazards on their jobs and public interest has developed to a point where articles are appearing on front pages of newspapers business journals and medical journals specifically related to occupational medicine Special studies of chemicals processes and practices have been initiated by government agencies and by industry itself Knowledge of increased liver cancer in vinyl chloride workers the discovery of kepone a pesticide produced under poor working conditions causing neurologic damage the problems with asbestos and the alarming occupational health problems reported among workers manufacturing DBCP dibromochloropropane a nematocid that has caused reproductive alterations in men from oligospermia to sterility are well known Not only have sterility and fertility become serious grounds for concern but also mutagenesis and teratogenesis in addition to public anxieties about occupational carcinogens a cause for worry    Daily Consular and Trade Reports ,1908
