Soft House Ian Pica Limbaseanu, 2019 The home has always been a source of softness a space for comfort vulnerability and expression built by humans for their own mental and physical preservation

However for a house to become a home it must be softened with objects and textures that address the human body and psyche in tactile and perceptual manners more intimately than architecture often aims From couch to carpet to remote control these are the entities that imbue identity into space Soft House is the transformation of a home back into a house again Through the use of fabric and cast able materials the dichotomy of object and space is dismantled to establish a new relationship between house home and inhabitant
