The English Harem:

The English Harem Anthony McCarten, 2001 A hilarious and provocative story of love, men, and Islam To spice up the tedium of her work on a supermarket checkout 20 year old Tracy Pringle lets her imagination run riot As she hands the change to Princess Leia or Omar Shariff her life seems quite exotic But far greater excitement is in store Sacked for her compulsive daydreaming she finds a new job as a waitress at the Taste of Persia despite the reservations of the restaurant's proprietor Samaan Sam Sahar This new world surpasses even Tracy's well stocked imagination and she soon finds herself falling headlong into dinner plates Islam and a rather tricky domestic arrangement But as word of this English harem spreads so too does prejudice and fear The English Harem dares to speak of English multiculturalism in the satirical tongue that most native writers keep mute Observer Anthony McCarten's sparkling new novel manages to deal with big issues cultural differences religion marriage in a funny and often moving way Sunday Tribune Dublin Anthony McCarten was born in New Plymouth in 1961 He is New Zealand's leading director and playwright His most recent play Ladies Night is in its thirteenth year and has won several awards He has written the screenplay for his first book Spinners which was published to wide critical acclaim and sold in several territories He divides his time between Wellington Los Angeles and London and is currently working on his next novel

Multiple Wives, Multiple Pleasures Joan DelPlato, 2002 This is a critical study of French and British art and written texts poetry literature travel accounts art criticism orientalist works about the harem produced in the period from 1800-1875 Original readings are provided for over 150 harem pictures from well known salon paintings to rarely published erotic popular prints and book illustrations Multiple Wives Multiple Pleasures examines these works closely often establishing fresh contexts for many of the more well known nineteenth century harem pictures and often providing a consideration of lesser known harem pictures that have been rarely published until now The English Illustrated Magazine, 1897

Edges of Empire Jocelyn Hackforth-Jones, Mary Roberts, 2008-04-15 Edges of Empire is a timely reassessment of the history and legacy of Orientalist art and visual culture through its focus on the intersection between modernization modernism and Orientalism Covers indigenous art and agency contemporary practices of collection and display and a survey of key Orientalist tropes Contains original essays on new perspectives for scholars and students of art history architecture museum studies and cultural and postcolonial studies Highlights contested identities and new definitions of self through topics such as 19th century monuments to Empire cultural cross dressing performance and display at the international exhibitions and contemporary museological practice
