The Early Poems:

Robin Hood Thomas H. Ohlgren, Lister M. Matheson, 2007 While references to Robin Hood began to appear as early as the thirteenth century in legal records the earliest surviving poems did not appear in manuscripts and early printed books until the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries Several fourteenth century allusions in the works of William Langland and Geoffrey Chaucer suggest that the rymes of Robyn Hood were widely circulating by the 1370s but it is vital to note none of these late fourteenth century works survives A better approach Thomas H Ohlgren argues is to focus on what has actually survived rather than on what might have existed As a result the poems Robin Hood and the Monk and Robin Hood and the Potter which survive in two different Cambridge manuscripts of the last third of the fifteenth century and A Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode which was printed at least seven times in the sixteenth century must receive pride of place in the canon because they have a physical reality as material artifacts in short they exist and provide valuable information about the places and times of their composition and dissemination

The Early Poems Alfred Tennyson Baron Tennyson, 1995 The Early Poems Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry Ketcham, 1900 First Awakenings Laura

(Riding) Jackson, 1992 When Laura Riding sailed for England in December 1925 she left many of her personal belongings in the safekeeping of a friend in Greenwich Village Among these items was a box containing the typescripts of more than two hundred poems a few of which had been published in magazines such as The Fugitive Poetry Nomad Lyric West and Contemporary Verse Then aged twenty four Laura Riding had already been hailed as a leading voice of her generation She had come to New York to pursue a life devoted to poetry but saw her American contemporaries as lacking a seriousness both poetic and personal which she considered to be the poet's essential attribute So when an invitation came from Robert Graves and Nancy Nicholson in England she accepted In Europe she found solitariness in which to probe the reality of poetry as a spiritual not merely literary inheritance Although by 1938 she could say that to live in by for the reasons of poems is to habituate oneself to the good existence her probing finally led her to renounce poetry she had found poetic utterance inherently incapable of yielding the full truth potential of words Meanwhile the correspondence with the friend in New York had continued In 1979 her friend wrote that she had discovered in storage the cache of poems left behind Arrangements were made for its return and during the months before her death in 1991 Laura Riding Jackson was preparing these early poems for publication Rediscovering these poems of her youth Laura Riding Jackson saw in them a precise anticipation of an envisaged whole of poetry Readers will find here the same confident authorial presence that permeates the self determining canon of her poetic work which she identified as her Collected Poems of 1938 reprinted in 1980 by Persea as The Poems of Laura Riding many of the themes developed in her later work and a characteristic freshness of vision and scrupulosity of word use These poems are experiments in what poetry can do They are early stepping stones on the path that led Laura Riding Jackson ultimately to a realization of what poetry cannot do Those familiar with the poetry of Laura Riding will read First Awakenings with the delight of enlarged recognition and those approaching it as an introduction to her work will find direction for the mind's journey
