Clearing the View Janell T. Collier, In the early days of the automobile winter driving was a perilous blinding endeavor Drivers were forced to either open their windows to the freezing elements or constantly stop to manually clear their windshields It was a chaotic era of transportation until Mary Anderson observed this absurdity during a snowy streetcar ride in New York City and envisioned a simple sweeping rubber blade Despite holding the patent for the first effective windshield wiper Anderson faced relentless rejection from a male dominated manufacturing industry Automotive executives dismissed her invention as a dangerous distraction that would hypnotize drivers fundamentally failing to understand the critical necessity of automated visibility Her groundbreaking mechanism was abandoned only to become a mandatory safety feature after her patent expired Clearing the View documents the frustrating and triumphant history of this ubiquitous invention It exposes the short sighted hubris of early automotive giants and highlights the vital contributions of female inventors who were systematically erased from the industrial narrative Discover the untold origin of everyday automotive safety Recognize the insidious nature of institutional resistance to new ideas and draw inspiration from the relentless pursuit of solving the world s most obvious problems bisac HISTORY Modern 20th Century TECHNOLOGY ENGINEERING Automotive amazon keywords female inventors history automotive technology origins mary anderson biography short excerpt Executives claimed a moving blade would hypnotize drivers blinding themselves to the single greatest safety innovation of the early automotive era Janell T Collier Clearing the View Mary Anderson and the Battle to See Through the Storm Informed by Knowledge Kathleen L. Mosier, Ute M. Fischer, 2011-01-07 The focus of this book is on how experts adapt to complexity synthesize and interpret information in context and transform or fuse disparate items of information into coherent knowledge The chapters examine these processes across experts e g global leaders individuals in extreme environments managers police officers pilots commanders doctors inventors across contexts e g space and space analogs corporate organizations command and control crisis and crowd management air traffic control the operating room product development and for both individual and team performance Successful information integration is a key factor in the success of diverse endeavors including team attempts to climb Mt Everest crowd control in the Middle East and remote drilling operations This volume is divided into four sections each with a specific focus on an area of expert performance resulting in a text that covers a wide range of useful information These sections present well researched discussions such as the management of complex situations in various fields and decision contexts technological and training approaches to facilitate knowledge management by individual experts and expert teams new or neglected perspectives in expert decision making and the importance of modeling expert performance through techniques and frameworks such as Cognitive Task Analysis computational architectures based on the notion of causal belief mapping such as Convince Me or the data frame model of sensemaking The volume provides essential
