

General relativity

From the world learned of the revolutionary Special Theory of Relativity proposed by Albert Einstein and published in 1905, physics underwent its most revolutionary change since the days of Isaac Newton. Nevertheless, Einstein had yet another surprise left: the so-called General Theory of Relativity, of 1916—a much more complex and complete theory from which several interesting predictions arise and have been confirmed over time.

Why a second theory?

According to Einstein, the laws of physics are the same for all observers, but the way they are perceived is different depending on the observer's motion. Einstein solved the problem of providing an theory by providing an equivalent principle.

A deformed universe

Einstein established that gravity was not a force, but rather the consequence of the deformation of space-time that any body with mass generates. Mass, when approaching a planet, for example, an object is not attracted by any force, but it travels through that curved deformation.

The most fundamental principle of general relativity is that the laws of physics are the same for all observers.

Light that bends

Perhaps the most surprising confirmation of one of Einstein's predictions, based on the General Theory of Relativity, happened in 1919 during the course of a solar eclipse.

According to the general theory of relativity, the path of light is curved by the presence of mass. This was confirmed during the solar eclipse of 1919, when the light from distant stars was observed to be deflected by the Sun's gravity.

In 1919, the British astronomer Arthur Eddington led an expedition to observe the solar eclipse of May 29, 1919. The expedition was successful in measuring the deflection of starlight by the Sun's gravity, which confirmed Einstein's theory.

4 dimensions

For the universe according to Einstein, space, although the "stage" where things happen, is not separate from the other three dimensions: energy and matter.

Gravitational lenses

Another prediction based on the General Theory of Relativity concerns gravitational lenses. Because of the distortions, which is also related to the gravitational deformation caused by gravity, the image of certain far stars and galaxies is distorted when seen from the Earth.

The image that we see is distorted and multiple. This is because the gravity of the lensing galaxy bends the light rays from the source galaxy.

Gravitational lenses are used to study distant galaxies and to measure the mass of galaxy clusters.

HERSCHEL & LORRY

The image shows a gravitational lensing event. The lensing galaxy is in the foreground, and the source galaxy is in the background. The light rays from the source galaxy are bent by the gravity of the lensing galaxy, creating multiple images of the source galaxy.

Electromagnetic waves

Einstein theorized that as massive gravitational fields bend space, the vibrations of atoms, in other words, the waves that form the electromagnetic waves "stretch" when being emitted. That is, they become "redder", the effect which causes a redshift in the observed frequency waves.

Perturbation of Mercury's orbit

Astronomers had discovered a discrepancy in the expected position of the planet Mercury that could not be explained by Newtonian or classical physics without including some hypothetical planet. Einstein used his theory to explain the discrepancy, obtaining the position of the missing planet.

The discrepancy was 43 arcseconds per century. Einstein's theory predicted a value of 43 arcseconds per century, which matched the observed value.
