Status Through Consumption Steven D. Silver, 2012-12-06 Consumption takes place in settings or environments which have both direct and indirect effects on its dynamic path Direct effects of environments on activities in consuming can occur through constraints that environments impose Environment can also have indirect effects on consumption through enduring modification of internalized constructs which enter heuristics for decisions on activities The importance of environments to consumption is increased by the definitional dependence of status on the judgements of others This study examines microprocessing in consumer activities for status as it interacts with structure in the environments of these activities The importance of environments in status activities provides the basis for a separate but related inquiry into observed differences in the form they take across societies Conjecture on the consequences of differences in the structure of environments for consumption that typify a society is studied in the narrative statements by members of comparison societies and in the content of print advertising in these societies Evolutionary processes which could establish observed differences in structure across societies are also considered in both their systematic and random components I review models of random drift and stochastic resonance as candidate forms for generating observed structure in environments Directions for the subsequent study of status through consumption are discussed P Introduction Status Through Consumption Knowledge Use in Nonwork Activities for Status Interactions of Consumer Microprocessing and Structured Environments Activity Feedback and the Stability of Structure Awards and Honors Systems in Structured Environments Cross Societal Comparisons of Narrative Statements on Consuming for Status Comparative Analyses of Consumption Appeals in the Print Advertising of the USA and France 1955 1991 Random Process in the Generation of Structured Environments Overview and directions for Study of Status Through Consumption

Consequences and Perceptions of Status Consumption Sona Klucarova, 2020

Consumption of certain products or services often brings status or prestige to the consumer Such status consumption plays an essential role in the lives of many consumers and in today's economy In my two dissertation essays I seek to examine the role of status consumption in consumer behavior context In the first essay I explore the connection between status consumption and charitable donation behavior The results of nine studies demonstrate that status consumption considered a self-centered behavior leads to increased charitable donations a prosocial outcome This effect is driven by subjective feelings of empowerment that consumers derive from status consumption My second essay investigates inferences made about consumers who share word of mouth about their status products I demonstrate across 12 studies that word of mouth about status products decreases consumers perceived status in the eyes of other people This is because word of mouth about their status products reduces the perceived cultural capital of status consumers which in turn reduces the perception of status This is paradoxical since consumers share word of mouth about their status products with the intention to elevate their status in the eyes of others In the two essays I use both lab and field experiments to test my hypotheses employ both mediation and moderation methods to test the psychological processes rule out an array of alternative explanations and explore several boundary conditions I conclude the two essays by outlining their contributions to both theory and marketing practice

Consumers who Experienced and Consumers who Did Not Experience Upgraded Status Nadine Josine Julia Curias,1991 The purpose of this dissertation was to explore differences in consumption behavior between consumers who experienced upgraded social status and consumers who did not experience such change The study was designed to offer marketers information about changes in consumption behavior that occur when consumers attain a higher social status level than their parents Social status was determined by three variables occupational status educational status and income level A significant difference in all three variables was considered indicative of upgraded social status Consumers who experienced such status change i e these consumers achieved a higher social status level than their parents were compared to consumers who had not attained a higher social status level than their parents Results from the study indicate that consumers who experienced upgraded social status differ significantly in their consumption behavioral patterns from consumers who did not experience increased social status It was found that consumers who achieved a higher social status level than their parents bought more prestigious brands than their parents while consumers who did not achieved a higher social status than their parents bought brands with similar prestige level as the brands their parents bought Moreover as compared to the latter group consumers with upgraded social status were motivated by brand intrinsic qualities when selecting clothes had a greater likelihood of purchasing prestigious brands and were more influenced by their friends than by their parents when selecting brands for grocery as well as big ticket items These consumers were also more likely to change brands when hosting an important dinner party had a greater likelihood of purchasing luxury brands with discretionary income and perceived Americans as owning enjoying more consumer goods services than consumers who did not achieve a higher social status level than their parents This exploratory study underscored the significance of social status as a segmentation too
