Tang Dynasty Poems:

Selected Tang Dynasty Poems of Li Bai ,2015-03-03 Li Bai is one of China's most famous Tang Dynasty poets affectionately known as the drunken poet. However his drunkenness was not of the bacchanalian type but rather a good natured form of intoxication which gave rise to a sensitive appreciation of the beauties of nature as well as the frailties and vulnerabilities of the human condition. There can never be a definitive translation of his poetry but hopefully the translations presented here might possibly capture something of the original which the reader might appreciate and which at least might serve as a reasonable introduction to the original Chinese which is presented together with the translation. In the end when we read the work of Li Bai in the original or in translation we find no real difficulty in appreciating his outlook on life whilst his themes still find resonance with us today either in China or elsewhere. In the Same Light Wong May,2022 2022 Windham Campbell Prize Winner Wong May's Landmark Anthology of Tang Dynasty Poetry Chinese poetry is unique in world literature in that it was written for the best part of 3 000 years by exiles and refugees. In this anthology we meet Du Fu Li Bai Wang Wei and others less familiar to readers in English. Known as the Golden Age of Poetry the Tang Dynasty was a time when poems were bartered in the marketplace for wine and tea and posted in temples and taverns the words of poets unmissable as street art and signage. Monks courtiers courtesans woodsmen and farmhands were fluent in poetry. More than reading matter it was a common currency whether as a necessity or luxury in times of rampant warfare droughts famine plague man made and natural disasters. Chinese history can be read in the words of the poets. It was left for poetry to teach the least we can only be grateful for that queasy moment in a Beijing hotel room when the project began slowly but inexorably to announce itself and gradually take hold. Peter Sirr Dublin Review of Books An extraordinary Afterword titled The Numbered Passages of a Rhinoceros in the China Shop is a magnificent peculiar tour de force that spans nearly a hundred pages and the book is transformed by its existence entrancing and entirely sincere. Daryl Lim Wei Jie Asian Books Blog A book very contemporary in its human closeness Wong May offers an extensive Afterword on the poetry and its interpreters. No mere translator's note this capacious essay is historical critical comical personal structural and mystical by turns exploring the Tang context of the original poets and the poetry's echoes over the last millennium or so up through Pound and Mao and Dharma Bums. Wong May hopes to return the text to the body of world literature through her investigations as a translator and critic. Her work deserves this hope which is better than any reparative aim for poetry always complicit in and resistant to the politics of its times. 772-846 a great poet of the Tang Dynasty of China is a famous and very influential writer in Chinese literary history Called the King of Poetry his writing is realistic on a wide variety of topics and simple and down to earth Here are five of what many consider to be his masterpieces in a fresh English translation and accompanied by the original Chinese Their titles are Song of Eternal Regret Journey of the Lute The Charcoal Seller Farewell at the Grasslands and On Seeing Wheat Harvesters

The Shattered Lute Bradford Miller,2011-04-01 is a collection of 200 poems written in China during the Tang dynasty 618-907 CE From the introductory chapter The Tang dynasty was the golden age of Chinese poetry and one of the high points of Chinese history Never before or since has poetry held the literary stage in China the way it did during the Tang Similarly at no time before the 21st century was China as prominent in world civilization as she was during the 7th and 8th centuries CE Never was the Chinese polity more powerful relative to its neighbors nor was Chinese society and culture more attractive to foreigners while remaining at the same time open to outside influences and products Chinese poetry did not begin during the Tang but the poetry of that era set the terms under which poetry would be written in China down to the 20th century Something remarkable happened during these centuries technique matured bureaucrats morphed into poets and what had been a concoction of song and ritual crystallized into literature once and for all Maples in the Mist,1996 The supreme beauty of Tang Dynasty poetry is captured in lucid translations and charming brush paintings A treasure of a book it is a classic Nien Cheng author of Life and Death in Shanghai
