U.S. Office of Technology Assessment,1992 Effects of International Trade on the Environment Caroline Mutuku,2018-07-02 Seminar paper from the year 2018 in the subject Economics Foreign Trade Theory Trade Policy grade 1 language English abstract This paper looks into the effects the international trade has on the environment Trade and environment is one of the most debated topics in management and economics studies over the years because of the increasing concerns on how international trade affects environment and vice versa That said the debate on trade and environment is not new and it emerged in the early 1970s with concerns such as environmental protection environmental policies on trade and the impact on trade on environment Most of the developed economies expressed interests on environmental degradation linked with the globalization process for instance industrial pollution In the 1980s environmental concerns increased as more complex environmental issues were raised such as the climate change and the depletion of the ozone layer Later in the 1990s the sustainable development concept was introduced as trade liberalization and the globalization process accelerated Several theories in support of international trade such as the economic theory has rendered the debate complex as the proponents of the economic theory argue that international trade is vital to economies because it results into a robust economic growth and also generates greater wellbeing of its citizens That said environmental policies and goals have been difficult to achieve during these debates Diverse arguments exist about international trade with a few ecologists in favour of environmental protection as they argue that international trade has resulted into environmental depletion as the demand of world natural resources continue to increase Of the two perspectives there is an intermediate concept which has been proposed the sustainable development which means that as international trade results into economic growth this growth must be accompanied by environmental policies and strict environmental protection rules Some of the defenders of sustainable development have supported free trade but with the inclusion of restrictions in multilateral negotiations so as to control the degradation of natural resources

Trade and the Environment Clara Brandi, Jean-Frédéric Morin, 2023-12-21 The mushrooming of trade agreements and their interlinkages with environmental governance calls for new research on the trade and environment interface The more than 700 existing preferential trade agreements PTAs include ever more diverse and far reaching environmental provisions While missed opportunities remain and harmful provisions persist numerous environmental provisions in PTAs entail promising potential

They promote the implementation of environmental treaties and cover numerous environmental issues. New concepts, data, and methods including detailed content analysis across multiple institutions are needed to explain these interlinkages and understand whether and how PTAs with environmental provisions can contribute to tackling global environmental challenges. Making use of the most extensive coding of environmental provisions in PTAs to date and combining quantitative data with qualitative analyses, this Element provides a comprehensive yet fine-grained picture of the drivers and effects of environmental provisions in PTAs. This title is also available as Open Access on Cambridge Core.

The Greening of Trade Law Richard H. Steinberg, 2002. In this first book to systematically compare how each of the world's major international trade organizations have handled environmental issues, leading specialists provide a balanced analysis of the development of trade and the environment rules in the World Trade Organization, the European Union, the North American Free Trade Agreement, the Free Trade Area of the Americas, the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, the International Organization for Standardization, and other key organizations. Deftly combining policy and theory, the authors offer a range of heuristics and normative orientations in an effort to understand one of the globe's most contentious and timely dilemmas. Trade, Development and the Environment World Trade Organization Secretariat Staff, 2000-11-24. In recent years, the relationships between trade and the environment and trade and development have become increasingly complex. The need to reconcile the competing demands of economic growth, economic development, and environmental protection has become central to the multilateral trade agenda. In this volume, various commentators debate the role of the World Trade Organization and other institutions in addressing these challenges. The book arises from the papers presented at two High Level Symposia hosted by the World Trade Organization in March 1999 on Trade and the Environment and Trade and Development. The first section of the work focuses on the relationship between trade and the environment. The issues addressed include the need for WTO members to pursue integrated trade and environmental policies in order to achieve sustainable development, ways in which the removal of trade restrictions and distortions can lead to positive environmental and development solutions, the relationship between WTO provisions and trade measures contained in environmental agreements, and the need for transparency and effective interaction between civil society and the trade community. The second section examines the growing importance of developing countries in the global trading system over the last 30 years and the ways in which the inequalities which persist between countries may be addressed. The papers include discussion of the need for integration of the least developed countries into the multilateral trading system, the ways in which international institutions may work together to realize the objective of development, the complex role of trade liberalization in development, and the importance of new technologies in accelerating integration between developing and developed countries.

Greening through Trade Sikina Jinnah, Jean-Frederic Morin, 2020-03-03. How the environmental provisions in US preferential trade agreements affect both the environmental policies of trading partners and the effectiveness of multilateral environmental agreements As trade negotiations within the World Trade Organization seem permanently stalled countries turn increasingly to preferential trade agreements PTAs between smaller groups of nations Many of these PTAs incorporate environmental provisions some of which require trading partners to enact new domestic environmental laws and use the enforcement mechanisms available within trade agreements as tools for environmental protection In Greening through Trade Sikina Jinnah and Jean Fr d ric Morin provide the first detailed examination of how the environmental provisions in US preferential trade agreements affect both the environmental policies of trading partners and the effectiveness of multilateral environmental agreements They do so through a combination of in depth qualitative case studies and quantitative analysis of an original dataset of 688 global PTAs Jinnah and Morin explore the effects of linkages between PTAs and environmental treaties and the diffusion of environmental norms and policy through PTAs Centrally they argue that US trade agreements can serve as mechanisms both to export environmental policies to trading partner nations and third party countries and to enhance the effectiveness of multilateral environmental agreements by strengthening their enforcement capacity They caution that PTAs are not a panacea for environmental governance deeper problems of unsustainable consumption and differential power dynamics between trading partners must be carefully navigated in deploying trade agreements for environmental protection

The WTO and the Environment James K. R. Watson, 2013 This book is a review of the development of the WTO dispute resolution procedure and the power and influence it has gained over the practises of the member countries as well as in other international treaties The book addresses the development of environmental competency in the WTO and examines the arguments of those who oppose WTO rule making with impacts on the environment The WTO s interactions with multilateral environmental agreements are considered and recent WTO cases including the 2011 US Mexico tuna dispute and the US sea turtles decision are analysed in detail In examining how an international organisation which was established with a specific purpose in mind has come to interact in fields beyond its original remit James Watson demonstrates how the dispute resolution system at the WTO has come to work in a judicialised manner operating with an informal system of precedent This has led to the contracting parties placing more reliance on the decisions of the dispute panels and appeal body when considering policy options with WTO rulings increasingly influencing the behaviour of national legislatures in regard to the environment The book goes on to make concrete recommendations based on existing practise in the WTO dispute resolution procedure which could enhance decision making in environmental cases heard by the WTO The book argues that this could be achieved with straightforward amendments to the WTO based on existing practices endorsed under the WTO for other policy considerations The WTO and the Environment will be of particular interest to academics and students of International and Environmental law
