Carbaugh, Liang-Shing Fan, 1976 International monetary reform is of vital importance to the countries of the world. Although many studies have been made of the structure and problems of the international payment mechanism, few provide an analytical survey of the international monetary system. This study analyzes the structural and operational limitations of past systems as well as the major reform proposals for modifying and or replacing the current system with a new payment mechanism. The authors describe the structure and nature of the international payment system and identify the issues relating to international adjustment, liquidity and confidence. They discuss the nature of international liquidity including liquidity's purpose, sources of demand and supply and potential shortcomings. They analyze the theoretical and empirical implications of the gold standard. Of primary concern is the extent to which the actual operations of the system corresponded to the theoretical role of the gold standard and the nature and limitations of the so-called dollar gold system that prevailed in the past quarter century until 1971. The major reform proposals of the international payment mechanism are next discussed. Included are the proposals of historical interest such as Keynes, Triffin, Bernstein, Stamp, Angell, Rueff and the currently debated issues of the Special Drawing Rights standard, freely floating exchange rates and the wider band and crawling pegged exchange rate mechanisms. Finally, the authors analyze the nature, operation and future role of the managed float exchange rate system which resulted from the international monetary crisis of 1973. Of particular interest are the effects of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) cartel on the U.S. dollar as a reserve currency and the monetary effects of the cartel's balance of payments surplus on the world financial markets. This study provides the historical background, the institutional framework and a balanced analysis of problems involved in the international monetary system. It will be of interest to all students of economics and finance and should be read by anyone wishing to understand the world of ever-expanding trade.

Strengthening the world monetary system : a statement on national policy by the Research and Policy Committee of the Committee for Economic Development, July 1973, 1973 Strengthening the International Monetary System - Taking Stock and Looking Ahead International Monetary Fund. Strategy, Policy, & Review Department, International Monetary Fund. Finance Dept., International Monetary Fund. Legal Dept., International Monetary Fund. Monetary and Capital Markets Department, International Monetary Fund. Research Dept., 2011-03-23 The current IMS has survived for over forty years underpinning strong growth in GDP and in the international exchange of goods and capital, one of its core objectives. As a result, interdependence among the world's economies has grown dramatically, making the existence of a sound system ever more important. At the same time, the system has exhibited many symptoms of instability: frequent crises, persistent current account imbalances and exchange rate misalignments, volatile capital flows and currencies, and unprecedentedly large reserve accumulation. These symptoms have come to a head since the 2008 crisis and brought renewed international momentum to the idea of attempting to reform the IMS. Yet the debate so far suggests little consensus on the underlying problems, let alone on the solutions. This paper identifies four root causes to these problems.

inadequate global adjustment mechanisms to prevent inconsistent or imprudent policies among systemic countries lack a comprehensive oversight framework for growing cross border capital flows covering both source and recipient countries inadequate systemic liquidity provision mechanisms and structural challenges in the supply of safe assets Statement by Ministers of the Group of Ten Group of Ten, 1964 Bulletin of the European Union , 1998 League of Nations Alfred Owen Crozier, 1919
