Supporting Students' Motivation
Johnmarshall Reeve, Richard M. Ryan, Sung Hyeon Cheon, Lennia Matos, Haya Kaplan, 2022-05-03 This is a book about teachers' classroom motivating styles. Motivating style is the interpersonal tone and face-to-face behavior the teacher relies on when trying to motivate students to engage in classroom activities and procedures. The overarching goal of the book is to help teachers work through the professional developmental process to learn how to provide instruction in ways that students will find to be motivationally enriching, satisfying, and engagement-generating. To realize this goal, the book features six parts: Part 1 Introduction introduces what teachers are to support, namely student motivation; Part 2 Motivating Style explains what a supportive motivating style is; Part 3 How to overviews the recommended motivationally supportive instructional strategies one by one and step by step; Part 4 Workshop walks the reader through the skill-building workshop experience; Part 5 Benefits details all the student, teacher, and classroom benefits that come from an improved motivating style; and Part 6 Getting Started discusses ways to begin using these skills in the classroom. Based on a successful workshop program run by the authors, teachers successfully improve their classroom motivating style. In doing so, they experience gains in their teaching skill and efficacy, job satisfaction, a renewed passion for teaching, and a more satisfying relationship with their students. This multi-authored book provides teachers with the practical, concrete, step-by-step skill-based how-to they need to develop a highly supportive motivating style.

Motivating Students to Learn Kathryn Wentzel, 2020-09-23 Written specifically for teachers in training, Motivating Students to Learn offers a wealth of research-based principles on student motivation for use in the classroom. Positioning the teacher as the decisive motivator, the book is grounded in the realities of contemporary schools, curriculum goals, and peer dynamics. Twelve rich chapters offer extrinsic and intrinsic approaches to guide daily practice, guidelines for adapting to group and individual differences, and ways to reach discouraged or disaffected students. This revised fifth edition features new instructional strategies, summaries of effective interventions, chapters on family, cultural diversity, and teacher motivation, and more.

Helping Students Develop Self-motivation Donald R. Grossnickle, 1989 This booklet provides a general blueprint to guide the overall process of teaching a student to be motivated to achieve and offers specific ideas for those concerned with promoting self-motivated behavior among students. Part one discusses teaching and learning self-motivation concepts and principles. These topics are covered: motivation as a trait or as a state; benefits of self-motivation; understanding the process of self-motivation; organizing for motivation; avoiding motivation pitfalls; self-motivation hints for parents, teachers, and students; and parents and homework. A student motivation inventory is provided. Part two discusses beginning the process of helping students to become self-motivated and successful. Thirty-six 1-minute motivation pointers are included, which provide ideas for parents and teachers to use to motivate students. These pointers range from encouraging students to read biographies, emphasize traits of successful persons which students can informally mimic, to teaching students to be reflective upon their own learning from both good and bad experiences. The report concludes that each student can benefit greatly when parents and school staff members assume responsibility for making self motivation of students a high priority in daily learning activities A bibliography is included ABL Student Motivation, Cognition, and Learning Paul R.
