

BIOLOGY LAB REPORT WRITING

TITLE

- Must be appropriate, clear, informative and specific
- Construct a title that will demonstrate that you understood the point of the study
- Consider your key words to guide your title

INTRODUCTION

- This section tells why the study was undertaken it establishes the framework for the entire report
- Should have an openings statement and there should be flow of thoughts (coherence) in your write up
- Define specialized terminology but your write up should not be a series of definitions
- Briefly explain any specialized technique to be carried out or how a specialized equipment works
- The background information must be related to the investigation
- Support all statements of fact and opinion with evidence i.e. cite literature; but not websites, primary sources only
- Never set out to prove, verify or demonstrate the truth of something. Rather set out to test, document or describe.
- Your introduction must lead to an aim/ objective/ research question /hypothesis/ prediction
- Your introduction should be brief and well thought out.

METHODS

- Must give sufficient detail on how the investigation was conducted. The detail should allow someone else or even yourself to repeat the investigation.
- Should be passive and in past tense
- Should be written in continuous essay format not point form
- Do not list the materials used separately, these should rather be reflected in the write up as you outline what was done
- Do not give unnecessary details and do not departure from the given instructions
- Include
  - . description of study site
  - . how the investigation was conducted
  - . variables measured
  - . variables to be computed and how this would be done, e.g. use of formulae

RESULTS

- This is the center piece of your report
- Shows a record of the data you have obtained through your experiment
- Synthesize and consolidate the raw data. Simply presenting raw data is not acceptable.
- Decide on the best way of presenting the synthesized data
- Do not present the same data in more than one way, e.g., in table and graph form.
- Each table must have
